Senate Blocks Drive For Economies, Votes Military $14.8 Billion

Rider Providing Slash by Truman Lost on Two-Thirds Ruling by Barkley

(Roll Call on Page 5)

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday stopped short a coalition drive for sweeping economies and then passed a 14.8 billion dollar military appropriation bill without a single major change.

A rider directing President Truman to cut back congressional appropriations 5 to 10 percent below his own budget fell three votes shy of the necessary two-thirds majority.

A ruling by Vice President Barkley cleared the way for the Administration victory. Barkley ruled the rider was legislation on an appropriation bill and as such required a two-thirds vote. The Senate voted 49 to 28 for the rider, but it wasn't enough.

A few minutes later the Senate rejected another economy thrust. Senator Paul Douglas (D., Ill.) moved to send the bill back to committee for a 275-million-dollar saving. The Senate beat this amendment, 49 to 25.

Senator John L. McClellan (D., Ark.), chief author of the proposed 5 to 10 per cent over-all slash, blamed its defeat on Senate absenteeism. He said 14 of 19 Senate absentees favored the rider.

McClellan said he may try again before the session is over but economy bloc leaders feel the drastic reduction has already missed the boat. Even if it wins in the closing days, they said the President has only to veto it.

Voting for the rider were 29 Republicans and 20 Democrats, mostly from the South. Twenty-five Democrats and three Republicans voted "No."

The big military measure, carrying funds for the Army, Navy and Air Force, was the last major money bill the Senate had to pass, but it still has to clear a House-Senate conference committee before final enactment.

In conference, it will take its place alongside of four other log-jammed bills awaiting final clearance—civil functions, Interior, foreign aid and third deficiency. Problem: How to clear them when the House is in recess!

Senators nonetheless glibly talked of adjournment by September 30. Senate Administration Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) held out hope of a long Labor Day recess as tempting bait for more speed. Promised Lucas: If the Senate passes the now-pending minimum wage bill by Wednesday.

6 Members Due to Retire

Truman Expected to Name New Fine Arts Commission

Wants to Modernize Board and Make It More 'Dynamic'

Dissatisfied with the Commission of Fine Arts, President Truman is going to begin replacing its members in about two weeks, it was learned yesterday.

The President wishes to "modernize" the commission, which he feels has "never been very constructive," a White House source said.

The term of Gilmore D. Clarke, chairman of the seven-man commission and a member for 17 years, expired in March. Commission members, who are unpaid, serve as an advisory body on public buildings.

In New York City yesterday, Clarke, dean of the Cornell University School of Architecture, told the Associated Press he did not expect to be reappointed to the commission.

Terms of three other members of the commission expire within the next few days, and terms of two other members end this year.

The President feels that the Fine Arts Commission has "mostly exercised its veto power," The Washington Post was told, and he wants the commission and the National Capital Park and Planning Com-

7500 in VA To Lose Jobs; Scores Here

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The Veterans Administration is making plans for a major new layoff of upwards of 7500 additional employes, it was learned last night.

A top official said the cutback may run as high as 10 per cent of the agency's administrative staff. The projected layoff, he said, is certain to wipe out the jobs of several hundred regular employes at headquarters here.

VA is building up a 2000-man temporary staff here to pay insurance dividends to GIs. This work will continue and additions to it will more than offset reductions made in the regular staff.

The exact extent of the reduction hasn't been determined because of the complicated nature of VA's 1950 budget which finally has congressional approval. However, officials in the budget and personnel ceiling offices are working overtime to trim VA's operations to fit the new budget.

An official announcement on when and where the big layoff will be made is slated for later.

In anticipation of a budget cut, VA knocked out 8000 administrative jobs in June. For the most part, employes here escaped the ax-swinging which was underestimated by agency officials.

VA's 1950 budget which became effective as of July 1 but which was enacted into law only a few days ago, gave it $855,000,000 for administration, medical, hospital, and domiciliary services. Originally, the House had voted $820,000,000; the Senate $861,000,000.

The Senate-House conference report on the bill explains that it carries "all additional funds" requested for new hospital beds to be put into operation during this fiscal year. The Senate added $16,-

Defense Dept. To Buy More In Idle Areas

Plans to Favor Manufacturers in 'Distressed' Sections

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

A three-point plan to help relieve unemployment in "distressed areas" throughout the country was announced last night by the Department of Defense.

Secretary Louis Johnson at the same time named the Munitions Board as his representative to work with Dr. John R. Steelman in carrying out President Truman's unemployment aid program. The three steps contemplated by the Defense forces:

1. Submission of information regarding Army, Navy and Air Force future buying plans to chambers of commerce and other business groups in affected areas. This will enable manufacturers to bid more readily than now on such orders.

2. Place contracts with firms in such "distressed areas" where permissible under the law.

3. Inauguration of Munitions

Justice Rutledge Improving in Maine Hospital

York, Me., Aug. 29 (AP).—Supreme Court Justice Wiley B. Rutledge, suffering from a circulatory condition, showed improvement at York Village Hospital today.

The report came from a hospital spokesman.

Vaughan Faces Senate Quiz Today

Investigators Take Steps to Determine Whether Maragon Should Be Indicted

'Pinups' of Notables

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, who concedes that he's no diplomat, testifies today at the Senate's 5-per-center investigation. He is not expected to be a passive witness.

Late yesterday the Senate Investigations subcommittee took steps to determine whether John Maragon, Gen. Vaughan's "good friend," should be indicted for perjury and income tax evasion.

Copies of the official transcript of the hearings—13 volumes in all—were sent to United States Attorney George M. Fay and to Commissioner of Internal Revenue George J. Schoeneman.

Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly, who is in charge here in the absence of Fay, notified William P. Rogers, counsel for the subcommittee, that the records would be studied "immediately" to determine whether Maragon has violated Federal laws.

Expected to Be High Spot

General Vaughan's appearance in Room 357 of the Senate Office Building at 10 o'clock this morning is expected to be the high spot of the investigation of 5-percenters and influence peddlers.

The name of the White House military aide, who has been described by President Truman as "the best whipping boy," has dominated the testimony from the outset. Usually it has been coupled with the names of James V. Hunt and Maragon.

General Vaughan has called Hunt, as well as Maragon, a "good friend."

The Senators want to know to what extent—and why—General Vaughan has helped the two men in their work of dealing with Government agencies for individual clients.

They want to know, also, why he befriended David A. Bennett of Chicago, dealer in perfume oils, who presented him with seven deep-freeze units for himself and others in the Administration.

Gen. Vaughan, assisted by attorneys he himself has retained, has been preparing his case for some time. He is expected to read a statement at the outset and then submit to questioning.

Senator McCarthy (R., Wisc.) said last week that "personal attacks" on committee members might be made, and he warned that they would be simply an attempt to divert the public's attention from what the committee was trying to do.

McCarthy amended that last night, however. Talking on a "Meet the Press" television program (NBC), he said he understood that General Vaughan had planned to make attacks on the committee but finally had decided to delete

Funds to Tool Europe Arms Plants Voted

Outlay Approved By Senate Groups But Vandenberg Plans Showdown

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Administration won a tentative victory yesterday when two Senate committees voted to permit friendly European nations to retool war plants with funds from the proposed $1,450,000,000 arms aid program.

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Foreign Relations Committee announced that his group and the Armed Services Committee had voted 11 to 9 to permit the use of some of the fund to buy tools, equipment, and raw materials in those countries signatory to the North Atlantic Alliance.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), who led the fight against the proposal, pointed out the decision was "a close one," and that only 20 of the 26 members were present.

Vandenberg to Ask Showdown

"I shall of course ask for a showdown on it, as previously planned in the full committee," Vandenberg said.

Vandenberg and others have argued that any such effort to boost European war potential should be delayed until after the formation of a defense council under the Atlantic Pact and the adoption by the council of an overall defense plan.

Actually no specific amount of money was involved in yesterday's action by the two committees. Last week, however, Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, testified that 155 million dollars should be used to stimulate weapons production in Europe.

Referring to Bradley's testimony, Connally said yesterday's decision would save the United States taxpayers 700 million dollars. Bradley had argued that stimulation of arms production in Europe would make it unnecessary for this country to supply from its own resources that amount in arms.

Offered by Tydings

The amendment permitting friendly nations to retool from the arms fund was introduced by Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the Armed Services Committee.

It was offered as a revision of an amendment proposed by Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) which would bar the use of any of the arms aid funds for the construction of new plants or their maintenance, or to meet labor payrolls.

Tydings' amendment provided that the retooling of existing plants or the purchase of equipment or raw materials would not be prohibited.

Still pending before the committee is Vandenberg's proposal to lop $160,990,000 of the amount President Truman has asked for the military assistance program. This is scheduled for a vote today.

Economic Health Of World Depends On Cooperation, He Tells Legion

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, Aug. 29.—On the eve of Anglo-American economic talks President Truman today cautioned both nations against impatience and misunderstanding.

He told a Convention Hall crowd of 10,000 at the American Legion's thirty-first annual convention that peace and the world's economic health depend upon cooperation and mutual concessions.

And, at the same time, he assured the people of other nations that the United States has no intention of interfering in their internal politics, whether it likes them or not.

"There are times, no doubt," said Mr. Truman, "when we shall become impatient or annoyed by delays and obstacles. But we cannot throw in our hand and walk out of the game. Nor can any other nation afford to do so.

"No Group Can Get All It Wants"

"The economic interests of nations are not easily reconciled. No group can get all it wants.

"But there is no other way to the solution of our difficulties than the way of mutual concession and cooperation."

None of the democratic nations, the President said, intends to interfere with the internal politics of another. Then he added in evident reference to criticisms of Britain's Socialist government:

"We know very well how we would feel if some foreign nation tried to tell us how to vote. We recognize that each nation has its own political problems and that it uses different political labels and different slogans from those we use at home.

"In the same way, nations have different business practices and different governmental devices for achieving the same ends."

Calls for Forbearance

The same forbearance, he went on, must be practiced throughout the free world if peace and economic recovery is to be assured.

"A community of democratic nations," the President said, "cannot insist on uniformity in matters of politics or business.

"The only uniformity on which they can insist—and this is what binds them together as free nations—is a firm adherence to democracy, coupled with a common desire to improve the standard of living of all their citizens."

Internationally important as his speech may have been it was not what the sweltering crowd of veterans expect on such occasions and

Lucas Says GOP Plots Filibuster, Assails Wherry

By The Associated Press

Senate Democratic Leader Lucas of Illinois said last night Republicans are trying to have a date fixed for adjournment of Congress so they can block the administration program by filibuster.

Lucas, in a blistering exchange with Senate Republican Leader Wherry of Nebraska, shouted that the only thing Republicans have done is "condemn, criticize and raise hell about everything since 1932."

Wherry criticized both Lucas and Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.) because they had objected earlier to allowing Wherry to put their voting records into the Congressional Record.

"They would like to have me say we can get out in 15 or 20 days and then filibuster to prevent any legislation," Lucas shouted.

Bevin, Cripps In Accord on Parley Policies

Expected to Resist Devaluation of Pound At Washington Talks

London, Aug. 29 (NYHT).—The British cabinet approved today the policies Great Britain will pursue at the Anglo-American-Canadian "dollar crisis" conference opening September 7 in Washington. At two meetings lasting more than four hours, the cabinet threshed out differences between Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps on the most effective way for them to approach the crucial tripartite talks.

Under the British system—full cabinet responsibility for all cabinet decisions—today's approval of the instructions for Bevin and Cripps means that they have at least buried their differences if they have not settled them.

Reliable informants reported that Cripps had succeeded, virtually single-handed, in persuading the cabinet to oppose devaluation of sterling almost at any cost in the Washington conference.

Reports, apparently inspired by the British treasury, were that Cripps succeeded in stiffening the cabinet's attitude in favor of a willingness to launch Britain on an era of even more stringent austerity.

The cabinet was believed to have approved plans for further cuts in British imports of dollar goods, particularly gasoline and food, if the United States Government fails to offer any other short-term solution to the increasing drain on the dollar and gold reserves of Britain.

Bolivia Mobilizes Against Rebels, Retakes Air Field

La Paz, Bolivia, Aug. 29 (AP).—The embattled Bolivian government, struggling against rightist revolutionary forces, tonight ordered the general mobilization of all citizens between 19 and 50 years of age.

Immediately after the mobilization decree was promulgated, it was announced that reservists 21 to 24 years old will be called up in the military district of La Paz tomorrow.

At the same time, the government announced is planes had again bombed Cochabamba, where rebels have held out for three days in defiance of air raids and a government ultimatum to surrender.

Reports have been received here that government troops were beginning to occupy the airport at Cochabamba, driving the rebels from the field.

Augur of Tax Repeal?

Senate Votes, 45 to 31, to Let Army Buy Oleo for Messes

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The dairy bloc in Congress took a licking yesterday when the Senate voted to let the Army buy oleo for the Nation's soldiers and airmen if it wishes.

The 45-to-31 vote was immediately hailed as proof that the oleo tax-repeal bill, passed by the House last spring, could win in the Senate if brought to a vote.

Since 1931 Army appropriation bills have contained a prohibition against spending any money to buy margarine, except for cooking. (The Army also buys for the Air Force.) The House this year threw out the rider and the Senate Appropriations Committee did likewise.

When the big military money bill was up on the Senate floor yesterday Senator Wiley (R., Wis.), leader of the butter bloc, charged "5-percenters, brass hats, the oleo lobby and the South" were ganging up on butter. The Army has estimated that it could save 10 million dollars a year by purchasing all oleo and no butter but has indicated it probably would split its purchases.

The Navy still prohibits the serving of oleo to sailors and a separate bill is necessary to change the Navy ration regulations which contain that proviso.

The 10-cent-a-pound tax on the "color-it-yourself" variety would be repealed by the House-passed measure.

Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.), leader of the oleo bloc, said yesterday's roll call is "a further con-

Mrs. Shaw, D. C. Social Arbiter, Sues for Limited Divorce

No Answer Yet Filed To Action in Circuit Court at Rockville

Mrs. Caroline Hagner Shaw, one of the social arbiters of the District through her publication, "The Social List of Washington," yesterday sued her husband, John Francis Shaw, for a limited divorce.

Charging cruelty, the action was filed in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville by her attorney, Edward J. Quigley.

Mrs. Shaw and her husband are members of old-time, prominent Washington families. Their marriage in 1924 was an outstanding social event. They have a son, John Francis Shaw, jr., 24, and a daughter, Mrs. Jean S. Murray, 23. The family home is at 4832 West Leland st., Bethesda.

In her action, Mrs. Shaw charged:

That her husband has frequently been under the influence of alcohol.

That he has subjected her to indignities, has cursed and reviled her, assaulted and beaten her.

That on July 4, he struck her, after which she called Montgomery County Police; that Shaw was put under $500 bond for a hearing September 6.

No answer to the complaint and charges has yet been filed by Shaw.

In addition to the limited divorce, Mrs. Shaw asks that the court grant her all her personal property.

The "Social List of Washington" was originated by Mrs. Shaw's mother, herself an arbiter of social custom and procedure in the Capital for many years. Mrs. Shaw became a social secretary when she was 15 years old, and for years before her marriage served a number of prominent women in the city. She also aided her mother in editing the book, and finally took it over.

The publication not only lists high public officials and other socially elite, but gives pertinent information about them, their pri-

Army Engineers to Be First

Sweeping Probe of Lobbies Is Forecast by Rep. Sabath

A sweeping probe of lobbies, with the Army Corps of Engineers as No. 1 target, was forecast yesterday by Chairman Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.) of the House Rules Committee.

Sabath said the House would start its inquiry soon after it returns from vacation, unless the Senate decides to join in and make it a joint congressional inquiry. Informed sources indicated last night the Senate has no such intention at the present time.

Sabath said that lobbying is at an all-time high, both in the number of persons involved and in the amount of money being spent for it.

"I've checked up," he said, "and more than 1900 lobbyists are registered. There are many more who have failed to register."

In the first quarter of 1949, Sabath said, lobbyists reported spending more than two million dollars—which is $200,000 more than the previous high, set in the last three months of 1948.

Registration of lobbyists is now tapering off, other congressional authorities said, presumably because nearly all the active lobbyists are already registered.

In an interview, Sabath picked the Army Engineers for the "No. 1 target" of the inquiry. He said that because the Engineers are responsible for building the costly rivers and harbors projects which are so dear to congressional hearts, the corps can get "just about anything it wants out of Congress."

"The Engineers lobby is so

Steel Panel Offers To Mediate Dispute

New York, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—President Truman's Steel Fact-Finding Board ended its hearings tonight and disclosed it had offered its service as mediator to stave off a Nation-wide steel strike.

Board Chairman Carroll B. Daugherty disclosed at the close of the 18-day hearings that the three-man panel had made its offer to the 58 steel companies and the United Steelworkers of America (CIO) on Friday. He said the board expected replies Tuesday or Wednesday.

Union General Counsel Arthur Goldberg said that Philip Murray, president of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO) and USW, and his associates would reply to the board Tuesday.

"Big Steel" Answers Tuesday

John A. Stephens, industrial relations vice president of U. S. Steel, the country's No. 1 steel producer, said "Big Steel" also would answer Tuesday.

If the offer is accepted the board will mediate while it writes its report to the White House for a "fair and equitable" settlement of the steel dispute. The board's function as mediator would be to try to bring both sides together in an amicable settlement.

Daugherty said that in offering its services as mediator the board would not waive its right to report to Mr. Truman, and would "sift the evidence and write a report consonant with our concept of the public interest."

Deadline Extended

Daugherty said earlier today that Mr. Truman had extended the deadline of the report from August 30 to September 10 at the board's request.

The deadline was extended as "Big Steel" asked the board to rule that pensions are not now bargainable and former War Secretary Robert P. Patterson asked the board not to lump small steel firms with "Big Steel" in its findings.

The 10-day extension bit deeply into the bargaining time left to the disputing parties before the September 14 strike deadline of the one millionth member United Steelworkers of America (CIO).

3 Hurt, 10 Held In Violence on Picket Line

Warren, Ohio., Aug. 29 (U.P.).—Three persons were injured and 10 others were jailed today as picket line violence broke out for the second time at the strike-bound Taylor Winfield Corp. plant.

Twenty-six police and sheriff's deputies struggled with massed pickets as they attempted to clear a path for supervisory employes to enter the plant which has been closed for 13 weeks by a strike of the CIO United Electrical Workers.

Six of eight persons arrested Friday during the first violence at the plant were jailed today. They were under $500 bonds pending hearings Tuesday.

Goodrich Strike Talk Reports are Conflicting

Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 29 (A.P.).—Union and company officials issued somewhat conflicting statements tonight on the progress of negotiations to settle the B. F. Goodrich Co. strike, which involves 17,000 employes.

Negotiators met at 9:30 a. m. and recessed at 5 p. m. After the session, J. W. Keener, Goodrich vice president, told a newsman:

"I think they (the negotiators) made some progress in clarifying some of the issues involved."

H. R. Lloyd, international president of the CIO United Rubber Workers, said, however, the company and the union were still "quite aways apart."

Included in the demands of the union are a 24-cent hourly pay boost and monthly, company-paid pensions of $100. Under the old contract Goodrich production workers averaged $1.51 an hour.

Air Force Reassigns Commands

By the United Press

The Air Force announced yesterday that strategic reconnaissance headquarters will be set up at Barksdale Air Base, Shreveport, La., and the training command will be transferred from there to Scott Air Base, Belleville, Ill.

Maj. Gen. Joseph H. Atkinson, who has been commanding general of the 311th Air Division at Forbes Base, Topeka, Kans., will become senior officer at Barksdale. Maj. Gen. Robert W. Harper will continue as air training commander.

The ninety-first Strategic Reconnaissance Group, which is being moved from McGuire Base, Wrightstown, N. J., to Barksdale, will have four squadrons of reconnaissance versions of the high speed, six-jet Boeing B-47 medium bomber.

The 301st Bomb Wing being moved from Smoky Hill Base, Salina, Kans., to Barksdale, will be the first outfit to be equipped with the B-47 bomber.

Announcement that these two groups will be given B-47's tended to confirm reports that the Air Force plans to order a sizable number of B-47's soon. Only two experimental B-47's have been delivered and only 15 operational models are on order.

Memo on B-36s Checked for Secrets Leak

A Navy court of inquiry yesterday set out to determine whether any military secrets were disclosed in the "anonymous document" which figured so prominently in the congressional B-36 probe.

The three-man naval investigating group officially asked the Department of Air Force and Department of Navy whether the document contained any "classified material."

Cedric R. Worth, suspended special assistant to Undersecretary of the Navy Dan Kimball, admitted writing the memorandum and circulating it to Congressmen and Glen L. Martin, Baltimore aircraft manufacturer.

Took Full Responsibility

Worth took full responsibility for the smear document, which charged high defense officials with wrongdoing in connection with procurement of the B-36 bomber. The suspended Navy official reputiated most of the charges at a hearing before the House Armed Services Committee last week.

The three-man Navy board, headed by Adm. Thomas Kinkaid, is charged with determining if any one else in the Navy was involved with Worth in the preparation of the document. Worth says he asked others for information but that no one collaborated with him. Some Congressmen feel others in the Navy were implicated.

The Kinkaid board announced it would hold open sessions beginning next week as far as this was possible without revealing secret information. It named Worth "an interested party," which permits him to sit in all sessions with his attorney, and cross-examine witnesses.

Air Force sources indicated that two statements in the document gave performance data on the B-36 which were "classified" when the memo was written, but have since been outdated by later tests.

Court Lets Hawaii Run Its Docks

Honolulu, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—The Hawaiian Federal Court today froze the profits of the Islands' government-operated stevedoring business and issued stop-gap orders virtually limiting the government's powers to the actual loading and unloading of ships.

The two-man court denied the CIO Longshoremen's request for a temporary restraining order to halt the government stevedoring operations entirely, but issued several other orders benefitting the union's cause.

The decision, read by Federal Judge J. Frank McLaughlin, restrained the Territory from any further anti-picketing suits against the union pending the court's final decision on an injunction.

It banned further distribution of profits to the idle stevedoring companies and ordered the Territory to refrain from applying any other provisions of the seizing laws "which would violate Federal rights of employes so long as those rights are exercised in good faith by the union and so as not to interfere with Territorial stevedoring operations."

In effect, the decision narrowed the permissible application of the Government's emergency strike seizure law to the actual physical function of loading and unloading of ships.

McLaughlin said the Federal court was retaining jurisdiction due to the possibility of Federal rights being violated.

The judge said he would allow the union to assign one placard-carrying union man to the area of Government stevedoring operations to demonstrate the union's protest.

Agriculture Dept. Cuts Hawaii Sugar Quota

The Agriculture Department yesterday cut Hawaii's 1949 sugar marketing quota by 200,000 tons as a result of the 4-month-old dock strike which has tied up shipping to and from the Islands.

To insure an adequae supply for U. S. consumers, the department re-allocated the quota among sugar producers in Cuba, Puerto Rico and sugar-cane growing States of the U. S. mainland.

Truman Signs Bill to Increase Wheat Acreage, Reduce Cotton

By the United Press

President Truman yesterday signed into law legislation which will give farmers a "bonus" of about two million acres of wheat under the Government's allotment program for next year.

The law will permit farmers to plant some 70,900,000 acres of wheat in 1949-50 instead of the allotment of 68,900,000 set by Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan about a month ago.

The bill was in the form of a rider to a cotton control law which the President also signed.

Democratic farm leaders meantime were summoned to a White House conference Wednesday by President Truman in an effort to hasten action on price-support legislation for 1950 crops.

The House already has voted to continue the present law under which the Government supports prices on some 18 crops at a full 90 per cent of parity. A Senate Agriculture subcommittee has recommended a compromise which would retain some features of the present law and borrow some provisions of the so-called Aiken flexible support law scheduled to take effect January 1.

In the face of this split, Brannan is insisting that his controversial "production payments" plan still is the only way to support perishable farm crops.

Invited to the White House conference were Brannan, Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) and Chairman Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) of the Senate Agriculture Committee, and Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.) of the House Agriculture Committee.

The cotton control law signed by the President gives the Agriculture Department sweeping new powers to cut down on cotton planting next year and thereafter.

The law revises the old "triple A" system of acreage allotments and marketing quotas, started in the early days of the Roosevelt New Deal. It is designed to deal with mounting cotton surpluses, resulting from increased yields per acre and the wartime entry of Western farmers into the cotton market long dominated by the South.

Reds Silent on Change In German Rail Gauge

Berlin, Aug. 29 (A.P.).—Soviet zone railway authorities today refused to discuss reports they are installing wide, Russian-gauge tracks to connect eastern Germany with Moscow.

Russian trains cannot now run on German tracks, which are the same width as tracks throughout Western Europe.

West Berlin sources said the Soviets already have built a wide gauge one-track line from Russia via Breslau to Frankfurt-on-the-Oder, on the Polish-German border.

Peron Vetoes Bill For Wife's Charity

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—President Peron today vetoed for economy reasons a bill appropriating 70,000,000 pesos ($14,000,000) for his wife's favorite charity.

The measure, approved two weeks ago by the National Congress, would have made the funds available to the Maria Eva Duarte de Peron Social Assistance Foundation, the agency through which Mrs. Peron aids the needy for Argentina and other countries.

PAYS FOR POLIO

New Policy Pays Maximum of $5,000.00 Toward Care and Treatment

COSTS LESS THAN 1 CENT A DAY!

This new Postal Polio Policy COSTS LESS THAN 1 CENT A DAY—yet it pays a maximum of $5,000.00 toward the care and treatment of polio (infantile paralysis), as authorized by the attending physician.

The policy will pay, when needed, $5,000.00 toward these expenses: Hospital bills, including room, meals, drugs, serums, medicines and other services; doctor bills; treatments; physiotherapy; use of iron lung; ambulance (maximum $50.00); orthopedic appliances (maximum $500.00); a round trip to another locality for special treatment.

Insurance goes into effect immediately! Written for any age—babies, children, adults provided polio is not present in the home. Pays regardless of what other insurance you have. NO TIME LIMIT on period over which benefits are paid.

The cost is less than 1 cent a day—only $3.00 for a full year's protection—for each person.

Just send us the name, age and relationship of each child and adult to be insured—enclose $3.00 for each person to be insured.

We will refund your money in full if you notify us within 10 days that you are not satisfied with the policy.

DO NOT DELAY! Address Postal Life & Casualty Insurance Company, Dept. 2765, 3934 Broadway, Kansas City 2, Mo.

ECA Funds Listed For 19 Countries

Paris, Aug. 29 (NYHT) — The 19 governments of western Europe have been told how much aide each can expect from the United States during the fiscal year 1949-50. The total comes to $3,377,000,000.

At a secret meeting last night, two officials of the Organization for European Economic Co-operation (OEEC) presented what is expected to be the final division of aid for the present year. They told Great Britain she could expect $962,000,000, instead of the $1,518,000,000 which the British recently described as a minimum to prevent economic disaster.

Although Congress has not yet settled the amount to finance European recovery for the fiscal year which began July 1, Robert Marjolin and Baron Jean Snoy of the OEEC picked the figure voted by the Senate for planning purposes, and divided it up 18 ways. Switzerland gets no American aid—although she participates in the recovery program.

The following figures show what each country has been told to count on this year and what each received last year:

	1949-50	1948-49
Austria	$174,000,000	$216,000,000
Belgium-Luxembourg	312,000,000	247,900,000
Denmark	91,000,000	109,100,000
France	704,000,000	980,900,000
Germany	348,000,000	509,800,000
Greece	163,000,000	144,800,000
Ireland	47,000,000	78,300,000
Iceland	7,000,000	5,200,000
Italy	407,000,000	555,500,000
Holland	309,000,000	469,600,000
Norway	94,000,000	83,300,000
Portugal	33,000,000
Sweden	48,000,000	46,600,000
Turkey	61,000,000	39,700,000
Trieste	17,000,000	17,800,000
Britain	962,000,000	1,239,000,000

ECA Aid to Date Tops $6 Billion

Paris, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—Dollar aid to the Marshall Plan countries has topped the six billion dollar mark with more than one-sixth of total authorizations going to the United Kingdom, according to figures released today by the Economic Cooperation Administration.

The ECA announced that participating nations were authorized to spend $293,300,000 of Marshall Plan funds during the month of July. This brought the total authorizations for goods and services in the first 16 months of the European Recovery Program to $6,208,600,000.

In July, Great Britain was authorized to purchase $46,500,000 worth of goods and services bringing its total authorizations to $1,660,100,000.

France topped the list of amounts authorized last month with $63,800,000. The United Kingdom was second, and the Netherlands, with $40,500,000, was third.

Mannstein Linked With War on Jews

Hamburg, Germany, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—The prosecution at the war crimes trial of former German Field Marshal Fritz Erich von Mannstein linked him today with Adolf Hitler's antisemitic campaign.

The prosecution read excerpts from Hitler's speeches as reported in the official Nazi paper Voelkischer Beobachter, and said that Mannstein cooperated in the campaign.

F. Elwyn-Jones, assistant prosecutor, said Hitler told the Reichstag on January 30, 1939, that an objective of the German people was the "extermination of the Jewish race in Europe."

Orders were given to the storm troopers and others to carry out this objective and "Mannstein cooperated," Elwyn-Jones said.

Other documents introduced on the fifth day of the trial claimed Mannstein once ordered the elimination of entire villages in the German army's path.

Sir Arthur Comyns-Carr, head of the prosecution, introduced documents before the British military court charging that Mannstein authorized a campaign of terror against the civilian population of Poland during the war. They accuse him of ordering Polish villages burned, civilians shot down on the streets, and synagogues blown up.

Sir Arthur read an order which he said was issued by Mannstein to his troops which stated that "the careless and soft attitude" of the German army in southern Russia could not be tolerated. The Jewish bolshevist system must be eliminated once and for all. Jewry is the middleman between the partisan activities in the rear and the Soviet armies."

Hickenlooper Favors Atomic Energy Setup

By The Associated Press

Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) said last night he does not favor any change in the law to give military officials control of the Nation's atomic energy program.

Hickenlooper issued a statement clarifying his position after Senator McMahon (D., Conn.) had telegraphed Perry Brown, national commander of the American Legion, that any change in the principle of civilian control would "inflict a powerful blow upon our national security."

McMahon is chairman of the Senate-House Committee on Atomic Energy; Hickenlooper is the ranking Republican member.

McMahon said he sent the telegram after the New York Times quoted Hickenlooper as telling a closed Legion meeting at Philadelphia last Saturday that "he had recommended that the balance of power in atomic energy control be shifted from the civilian to the military."

Hickenlooper said the newspaper's interpretation was "completely opposite to things I actually said." He made public a telegram to the Times which said, in part:

"In effect, what I said was that a substantial part of the philosophy underlying the present atomic energy law is pointed toward reliable and satisfactory international controls of atomic energy and atomic weapons.

"Inasmuch as international control has made no progress and present hopes are dim and we still have the sole responsibility for atomic energy, I raised the question as to whether or not we should re-examine our policy under the act with the view to giving the military increased responsibility in custody and control over finished weapons only. . .

"I affirmatively stated that I believe in and support the basic policy of civilian control . . .

"At no time have I advocated nor do I now advocate any basic change in the atomic energy act that would place the military in control of the atomic energy program."

British Girl's Marriage To Maharajah Revealed

London, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—The secret marriage of the wealthy 26-year-old Maharajah of Jodhpur and Sandra McBride of England was revealed today when the young girl, clad in flowing Indian robes and escorted by Indian servants, visited her brother.

She arrived at industrial Stoke-on-Trent in a hired limousine. Her brother, D. E. McBride, said only that she was married to the Maharajah, was travelling incognito.

U. S. Envoy in India Due Here for Talks

New Delhi, India, Aug. 29 (AP).—The United States Embassy announced today Ambassador Loy W. Henderson is leaving for Washington in early September for routine consultations. He will go by way of the Pacific, and visit American diplomatic missions en route. Henderson will remain in the United States for the American tour of India's Prime Minister, Jawaharlal Nehru, in October.

Ex-Wac Returns With 6 Twins Born Within 27 Months

New York, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—A former WAC flew home to visit her mother today, and caused an uproar at LaGuardia Field.

Mrs. Charles K. Summers, of Doylestown, Ohio, was accompanied by her husband and their children—three sets of tow-headed twins ranging in age from 1 to 3 years. The mother and children all were dressed in matching green cotton plaid outfits.

"I always wanted seven children, but didn't dream it would take only 27 months for six," Mrs. Summers said.

Langley to Get Two B-45 Jet Squadrons

Two squadrons of B-45 jet bombers will be assigned to Langley Air Force Base, Va., Air Force headquarters said yesterday.

Air Force officials also announced the transfer of the 161st tactical reconnaissance squadron of the 363rd tactical reconnaissance group to Shaw Air Force Base, Sumter, S. C. However, headquarters of the group will remain at Langley.

The two squadrons to be sent to Langley are members of the 47th bomb wing at Barksdale Air Force Base, La., which is being deactivated under a recent order of air force cutbacks by Defense Secretary Johnson.

Reds' Trial Hears Capitalists Will Be Put to Work in Mines

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Comes the revolution, said a Communist trial witness today, and America's capitalist "oppressors" will be put to work "in the mines and other places."

But such a revolution need not be accompanied by force and violence, added the witness, Max Weiss, at the conspiracy trial of 11 top Red leaders.

Weiss, former Communist national education director in the U. S., described himself as a "sort of specialist" on Red revolutionary theory.

He testified he made a dozen or more trips abroad, including two to Russia, as a party worker.

In a one-hour discussion of his lectures, Weiss explored the so-called "inevitability" of force and violence in a Communist revolution.

In Hungary and Finland, he testified, proletarian governments were established without violence.

"There is no such Marxist principle as the violent overthrow of government being a necessity," Weiss said.

Federal Judge Harold R. Medina asked Weiss about earlier testimony by defendant Robert G. Thompson, who was quoted as saying that after the revolution the capitalist "oppressors" would become the "oppressed" and would "be put to work."

"What kind of work?" asked Judge Medina.

"In the mines and other places," answered Weiss.

Reds Blame Wall St. For Communist Trial

London, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—Moscow Radio reported today that the New York trial of 11 Communist leaders is guarded by "hundreds of policemen armed with revolvers and rubber truncheons."

The broadcast, quoting a Tass Agency dispatch from New York, said:

"For eight months the trial of the leaders of the Communist Party has been going on by order of the Wall Street rulers.

"Hundreds of policemen armed with revolvers and rubber truncheons guard the Federal Court which is conducting the anti-Communist trial.

"Every morning hundreds of citizens form long queues trying to get into court."

Angler Catches Pike, Perch and $102

Walker, Minn., Aug. 29 (AP).—A walleye pike, northern perch, and a wallet containing $102 was a New Yorker's catch in Leech Lake Saturday.

The wallet was that of Miles Dale Pothast of Melbourne, Iowa, who lost it a year ago.

George Woodhall hooked the wallet while trolling. The operator of a resort, where Woodhall was staying, recalled that Pothast lost the wallet last August.

Objections To Tidelands Shift Renewed

Administration spokesmen offered Congress wide leeway yesterday to split up the revenue from oil-rich tidelands, but renewed objections to any outright transfer of the land to the States.

Secretary of the Interior Krug declared that President Truman will veto any legislation which would transfer ownership of the submerged coastal lands to the States.

Mr. Truman did veto such a bill which Congress passed several years ago. The issue has been a smouldering controversy ever since.

Krug said such legislation is an attempted donation to the States of land over which the Supreme Court has held the Federal Government holds dominion.

Sees Stripping Attempt

Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman termed the various bills to transfer the land to the States "an attempt to strip all the people of the United States of their rights to untold resources in the thousands of square miles of mineral-rich submerged coastal lands."

Both officials appeared before a House Judiciary Subcommittee.

Efforts to reach a compromise on the issue have centered around the division of revenue produced in the submerged lands. Krug offered an olive branch by suggesting that Congress decide the proper division of funds.

"I believe the President would be inclined to acquiesce in whatever provision might seem fair to Congress," he said.

Will Reject Nullification

But he said Mr. Truman will reject any bill which attempts to nullify the findings of the Supreme Court, in a California case, that the Federal Government holds paramount rights to the submerged lands.

"The President has informed me that he strongly opposes the various pending bills which are designed to transfer to the coastal States, as a gift, the immensely valuable rights which the people of all the United States have in the submerged lands and mineral resources of the continental shelf," the Secretary said.

Mrs. Roosevelt Knew Youth Unit Was Red

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today she knew for a long time that the American Youth Congress followed the Communist line, but worked with it just the same.

Her purpose, she wrote in McCall's magazine, was to change the organization's course.

She said the experience "was of infinite value to me in understanding some of the tactics I have had to grapple with in the United Nations."

Mrs. Roosevelt's article was the fourth installment of a new series of memoirs.

Of the depression-born American Youth Congress she said:

"I had great sympathy for these young people, even though they annoyed me. I have never felt the slightest bitterness toward any of them and, as a matter of fact, I am extremely grateful for my experience with them.

"I learned what Communist tactics are. I know how infiltration of an organization is accomplished. I understand how Communists get themselves into positions of importance. I understand all their methods of objection and delay, the effort to tire out the rest of the group, then carry the vote when all their opponents have gone home."

Dixiecrats Challenge Truman Bloc

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 29.—Mississippi States Rights Democrats laid down a ballot box challenge to pro-Trumanites today and were promptly accepted—with a stipulation.

The States Righters called for a special election to name a State committee from tickets of their own and the pro-Truman element. Gov. Fielding Wright, 1948 States Rights candidate for Vice President, agreed to the election with clearly designated tickets to make the issue clean-cut.

"We will be glad to accept," said pro-Truman Leader Clarence E. Hood, ". . . if the elections will be free."

The election challenge came from the present State committee, made up of States Righters. The committee also openly defied the national party organization by unanimously re-electing the national committeeman and committeewoman expelled last week by the national committee, J. B. Snider and Mrs. Hermes Gautier.

Carrier Pigeon Brings Barkley Chicago Message

Vice President Barkley received yesterday a message delivered from Chicago by carrier pigeon.

From Jack Arvey, Chicago Democratic leader, the message said: "Thank you for your acceptance of our invitation to address the Democratic victory picnic on September 11."

The pigeon is owned by Harry Burke of Washington, president of the American Racing Pigeon Union. It was turned loose in Chicago Saturday morning and arrived home Sunday morning.

South China Defense Line Outflanked

Hongkong, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—The main Communist armies outflanked the government's South China defense line today, and sent two columns racing toward Canton.

Simultaneously, Communist guerillas sprang to action throughout South China, opening a new and greater threat to the rear of the emergency capital.

The Nationalists began throwing up defenses at Waichow (Huiyang), east river port 70 miles east of Canton, to meet the newest threat.

Communist Gen. Liu Po-cheng's main forces outflanked the Nationalist defense line at the Kiangsi-Kwangtung border, and drove into Kwangtung, of which Canton is the capital, at several points.

At the western end of the defense line, red units captured Hoping, 137 miles northeast of Canton, and pushed south toward Lungchun, 30 miles away. Guerillas captured Pingyuan, further to the east.

At the western end of the defense line, the Communist captured Yucheng in a forced 38-mile march south from Kweiting, and headed toward Yanfa, 137 miles north of Canton. They were expected to link up with guerillas at Kukong, 118 miles north of Canton.

Lest We Forget!

AMERICA HAS LOST IN ASIA

- In the great American newspaper tradition, Pulitzer Prize Winner S. Burton Heath and 14 other American journalists traveled to Southeast Asia to search for the truth about the Indonesian crisis. Mr. Heath and 12 of his colleagues died in the line of duty in a Bombay plane crash. They had reported that "before the end of 1949, the Indonesians probably will be free . . . their freedom will be complete and unconditional." While most Americans hoped that the crisis soon will be a closed chapter it seemed of vital importance that everyone read Burton Heath's last testimony to his fellow Americans. It is a record for history, a guide for America's Far East future.

MOSCOW'S CHANCE IN INDONESIA

By S. Burton Heath
NEA Staff Correspondent

". . . Having lost China, we have now given Moscow the opportunity, for which she has been waiting and working, to move into Indonesia, an area that might prove the key to a major war in the Pacific. Directly and through the United Nations, we have forced the Dutch to free Indonesia so quickly and suddenly that, for the next five years, during which World War III may be either unavoidable or improbable, there will be no stable government there.

"We have thrown our wholehearted support to the least democratic, least Western-minded political group in the islands, thereby giving it a position of dominance in the coming new government.

"Military and businessmen feel sure that Washington must be aware of the strategic importance of Indonesia, in any possible war between Russia and the democracies. There are two major reasons for this:

"First, because these islands are an aerial crossroads of the South Pacific. From Batavia to Australia is only 1,600 miles; to the Philippines is about 1,400 miles; to Singapore is only 500 miles. From Java, from Borneo, from Sumatra, from Celebes, modern long-range bombers could harass the Philippines, Australia, the sea routes of the Indian Ocean, the South China Seas, the South Pacific in general. Second, because the islands are rich in vital oil. There are known reserves of a billion barrels . . .

China is pretty thoroughly in Moscow's hands now. Soviet agents are operating diligently in Indo-China, Burma, Malaya. Observers who have studied that area would be surprised if the Communist push is not continued southward from China—toward Indonesia . . .

". . . The United States, Great Britain and other Western democracies have a tremendous stake in the maintenance of a stable government in Indonesia. Such a government would be anxious and able to resist Soviet aggression, and, against a real attack in force, could be trusted to call upon the Western military powers for assistance. There was a chance to get such a government there. The United States could have chosen the Federalists, but deliberately turned its back on the opportunity, and gave its wholesouled support to a group, 'The Republic,' whose intentions are questionable and whose ability is yet more doubtful . . .

"The question, for Indonesia, was simple: Should the self-appointed Republic oligarchy, representing principally Java, impose a unified national state on some 39 other nationalities, scattered over an area almost as big as the U. S.? Without even hearing the other side, the U. S. answered that one 'yes.'

". . . Because the United States has boldly and unswervingly backed this Republic in all its controversies with both the Dutch and the rest of Indonesia, the Republic—and President Sukarno and Vice President Mohammed Hatta—will go into the constitutional convention in The Hague in a very strong position. The Republic has never held an election for any office—executive or legislative—in the almost four years it has been in existence. On the other hand, the negara of East Indonesia has held elections by secret ballot for all local offices, and in September will elect a negara parliament, by secret ballot. And Borneo is preparing to establish an island-wide negara with democratic elections.

"So the American action has served to give undue weight, in the framing of a constitution for the U. S. of Indonesia, to the least democratic of all major groups in the islands.

"At The Hague, observers reason, the Dutch will sign almost anything to get out of this mess. The Indonesians will get their independence without having solved the question that has caused bloodshed and rioting ever since 1945—how far can the Sukarno-Hatta republic impose itself on the rest of Indonesia? . . ."

Alexandria Girl Hurt in Collision

An 18-year-old Alexandria girl was injured early yesterday in a three-car collision on River rd. near the Glebe rd. intersection during the height of the severe rain and wind storm which swept Greater Washington.

June W. Griffin of Route 1, Alexandria, was treated at the scene for severe head and face lacerations by three nurses from Garfield Hospital who were driving to their homes in Alexandria at the time of the crash. She later was admitted to Alexandria Hospital, but was discharged a few hours later.

The nurses, who had just come off duty at Garfield, were Mrs. Mary Holloway, Mrs. Mary Avakin and Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell. According to Mrs. Campbell, flashlights and first-aid materials furnished by passing truck drivers lent the first-aid scene an "emergency room" atmosphere.

Alexandria police said Miss Griffin was thrown out of the car she was driving after it collided with autos driven by Alton M. Reynolds, 46, Clinton, N. J., and Paul M. James, 52, 1500 N. Highland st., Arlington, around 12:30 a. m. Neither of the other drivers was injured.

Three persons received minor injuries late yesterday when an auto driven by a man with his leg in a cast, turned over and struck a tree on Highbridge rd. near Bowie, Md.

The driver, George E. Brown, 24, of Mitchellville, who escaped injury told Prince Georges County policeman William Little, that the accident occurred when a rear tire blew out.

The injured passengers, treated at Freedmen's Hospital, were identified as: Bernard C. Brown, 42, Vista, Md., a brother of the driver. He received cuts about the head and hands. Charles Thomas, 21, Mitchellville, cuts on the head, and Lewis Johnson, 17, injuries to the shoulder and wrist.

Brown was charged with failing to have a driver's license or auto tags. He will appear at a court hearing September 8. He told police his leg was put in a cast some time in April after he broke it in seven places while working at a construction job.

Simpson Funeral

Funeral services will be held in Hendersonville, N. C. today for Miss Florence I. (Peggy) Simpson, 32-year-old stenographer for the Office of the Assistant Secretary of the Army, who was killed instantly in an auto crash early Sunday near Tryon, N. C.

Miss Simpson

Miss Simpson, who lived at 1633 Newton st. nw., was journeying to Hendersonville to attend the wedding of her half-sister. She was accompanied by her sister's fiance, Rufus C. Allen, who escaped injury.

Shortly before midnight Sunday, five persons were injured in a head-on collision on the Mount Vernon blvd., just south of the north entrance to the National Airport.

Park police listed the injured as Andy B. Clay, 21, Dumfries, Va., who suffered chest and rib injuries; Wallace Belcher, 23, 1836 California st. nw., lacerations of the leg; Bandy Barnes, 27, 1865 C st. ne., contusions of the head and left elbow; Morgan Humphries, 24, 1016 8th st. ne., back injuries, and Warren S. Craun, 41, Front Royal, Va., lacerations of the face and knee abrasions.

Belcher, Barnes and Humphries, all passengers in a taxi driven by Clay, were all treated at Emergency Hospital. Clay and Craun, driver of the other car, were treated at Alexandria Hospital.

Tydings Says

Appointment Of Wallgren Held Possible

By The Associated Press

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) said yesterday that only through a recess appointment could Mon C. Wallgren become chairman of the National Security Resources Board without Senate confirmation.

A report from Seattle, Wash., said Wallgren plans to return here in about a month.

Friends of his there said the former Washington Senator and Governor believes President Truman yet may appoint him to the key defense post without necessity of Senate confirmation. They suggested this could be done under a new reorganization act passed by Congress.

Tydings, who is chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, gave his opinion when asked about this report.

He told a reporter the revision of the Unification Act, which set up the Defense Advisory Board, retained a provision requiring Senate confirmation for the board chairman.

He added that Wallgren probably could serve in the $14,000-a-year post through a recess appointment by Mr. Truman. Recess appointments are made for an interim period when Congress is not in session. Such appointees can serve only until the Senate again convenes. Then to continue serving they have to be confirmed by that chamber.

Wallgren was nominated for the post by Mr. Truman earlier this year. His confirmation was blocked in the Armed Services Committee.

The White House subsequently withdrew the nomination, saying the action was taken at Wallgren's request.

Area Facing Reductions in Rail Services

The 40-hour week for "nonoperating" employes of the Nation's railroads, effective September 1, will result in some curtailment of services in Greater Washington.

Representatives of three major lines serving Washington said yesterday the reduced work week would force closing of all freight offices here on Saturdays and would force closing of all freight for passenger ticket offices maintained in the downtown areas.

Saturday closing of the freight offices will suspend freight deliveries on that day.

The central ticket agency operated by the Washington Terminal Co. at Union Station will be open for ticket sales on Saturday and Sunday.

According to spokesmen for the B. & O., Pennsylvania and Southern railways, the Saturday curtailment of freight deliveries will have little effect. Few freight shipments, they pointed out, have been received on Saturdays, and recipients simply will have to change their schedules to arrange for delivery during the "normal working day."

The railroads will close ticket offices in smaller communities on Saturday and Sunday.

"Even if all ticket offices are closed on Saturday," one railroad man pointed out, "a person can always get on the train and pay his fare to the conductor in the event of emergency."

Emergency preparations also have been made for recipients of freight loads. All major lines have arranged to have "standby" crews available for the delivery of perishable goods and any emergency supplies that might reach their yards on Saturday.

The five-day week is the result of a recommendation made by an emergency board, appointed by President Truman last January. It was recommended that the new schedule become effective by September 1 so that all employes of the nonoperating railway labor unions be given two consecutive days off each week.

Bridges Charges Van Horn Tried to Block UMW Fund

Concord, N. H., Aug. 29 (U.P.)—Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), neutral trustee of the United Mine Workers Welfare Fund, charged tonight that Ezra Van Horn, the operators' trustee, had attempted to "hamstring" the fund and block its use for the "humanitarian purpose for which it was set up."

Bridges' charge came in reply to a statement by Van Horn that Lewis and the New Hampshire Senator had set up a welfare fund that was unsound and in danger of collapsing.

Bridges sided with UMW President John L. Lewis in defending the fund which he said was set up in a "belated attempt to lighten the suffering of those American (mine) workers."

"When Van Horn blocked every move to allow the fund to function, I voted with John L. Lewis to break the tie so the fund could do its job," Bridges said. "I have certainly not always agreed with everything Lewis has done in running the United Mine Workers, but that is none of my business.

Johnson Hailed By NAM for His Economy Order

New York, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—The National Association of Manufacturers said today that Defense Secretary Louis A. Johnson's economy order in the Military Eestablishment was the "first actual move to reverse the tide of mounting Government costs in 16 long years."

In a letter to Johnson, Earl Bunting, managing director of the NAM, said Johnson's reduction of civilian personnel was an 'inspiring example of a high order of service in the public interest."

At the same time, the NAM News asked the 15,000 members of the association to try to quickly absorb into private jobs the men who were fired as a result of the economy move.

Greatest Victory

Greeks Win Battle for Grammos

With Greek Troops on the Grammos Front, Aug. 29 (AP).—The Greek army tonight claimed its greatest triumph in the three-year civil war.

The five-day battle for the Grammos Mountain bastion of the guerillas virtually ended this morning, except for mopping up. The entire southern part of the Communist stronghold has been cut to pieces by swiftly striking regular army units and commandos.

The Communist guerillas now are trying to escape into Albania through a narrow strip of frontier believed to be less than five miles wide.

The only other organized guerilla positions still intact are pressed against the border between Kamenic, massive mountain north of Konitsa, and the area containing the villages of Assinohori, Hionades and Gorgopotmos, all of which may fall in a few hours.

Kamenic, 6700-foot mountain, and Steno Ridge are being defended desperately in order to give as many guerillas as possible a chance to escape into Albania.

With the liquidation of the Visti bastion to the northeast, more than two weeks ago, the Grammos area remained the last guerilla area in Greece. At the start of the Greek army's blitz five days ago 5000 rebels were believed in the area.

A staff communique listed 296 killed and 264 captured yesterday, and the army's losses as 18 dead and 120 wounded.

The climax of the campaign came yesterday when the Ninth Division battled to the top of 8500-foot Mount Grammos, on the Albanian border. This was after the last escape route in the northern Grammos area had been latched shut by a division which crossed the Baroukas Valley.

Cohen Mob Member Grilled in Slaying

Los Angeles, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—Two New Jersey detectives grilled Harold (Happy) Meltzer today about the icepick murder of Charley Yanowski, Jersey City racketeer.

Meltzer, a member of the Mickey Cohen mob, was booked Saturday as a suspect in the Yanowski slaying. Yanowski's body was found in a Clifton, N. J. schoolyard, July 18, 1949.

Strikes Hit Finn Metal Trades

Helsinki, Finland, Aug. 29 (AP).—Finland's Communist-led strikes spread to the metal industry today, virtually stopping work on five ships being built for Russia as war reparations.

Socialist Prime Minister Karl A. Fagerholm had predicted the Communists next would move against metal industries in an effort to create difficulties for his government in its foreign relations. Most of the country's metal industry is producing reparations goods for Russia.

Only 150 of the 2600 employes of the Crichton-Vulcan Shipyards at Turku showed up for work this morning after a rump meeting of metal workers there voted to strike. The yard said there were no wage or other demands.

Many other Turku metal industries, including the Pansio Shipyards, were affected.

Before the vote about 3000 anti-Communist workers left the meeting. There are about 4000 metal workers in the city.

Metal workers at Tikkakoski, Pori and Salo voted against striking.

Thousands of workers remained on strike in many other industries, ranging from brewery workers to dockers. A survey showed 82 ships were tied up and only 80 were being worked, partly by volunteer labor.

it can take a week's holiday. Then it would return to one of the Senate's hottest chores—Reciprocal Trade Act extension.

Almost lost in the economy scuffle were the terms of the military bill, approved just as the committee had reported it. The committee itself had used the paring knife. Chiefly by pruning back the Air Force, it cut the bill $1,118,000,000 below the House total.

Further Trim Authorized

In addition, the bill directed Secretary of Defense Johnson to trim 434 million dollars from Army, Navy and Air Force funds "wherever, in his discretion, such action would not jeopardize the national security."

A point of order by Lucas against McClellan's economy rider, and a parliamentary wrangle over his right to make it, tied the Senate in knots for three hours before the vote.

Lucas contended the rider was plainly legislation on an appropriation bill, that only a two-thirds vote suspending the rules would make it in order. Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) and McClellan challenged Lucas' right to make the point. They said a unanimous consent agreement to vote on the rider at 2 p. m. in effect waived all points of order against it.

Barkley Ruling Upheld

Vice President Barkley ruled that notwithstanding the agreement any amendment was subject to a point of order. McClellan appealed Barkley's ruling to the Senate in an effort to by-pass the two-thirds vote requirement. But the Senate upheld Barkley, 41 to 36.

Barkley then sustained Lucas' point of order and McClellan accepted this decision without an appeal. Instead he moved to suspend the rules to clear the way for his rider. The showdown came on this motion.

In the confusion, Senator Douglas, who had announced he would support the rider as a last resort, voted against it. Later Douglas got Senate consent to change his vote, saying he thought he was voting on the second Barkley ruling.

In the debate leading up to the vote, Lucas said Congress would rue the day it delegated its appropriations authority to the President and called it a "dangerous precedent." He said Congress has shown it could do its own cutting by trimming appropriations nearly two billion dollars.

Called Buck-passing

Like Lucas, Senator Hubert H. Humhprey (D., Minn.) called it "buck-passing" and said Congress should have the courage to slice its own appropriations.

Senators McClellan and Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), however, said there was nothing new or unconstitutional about granting the President discretion to save money.

Said McClellan: "The President cannot escape his share of either the blame or the legal and moral responsibility for any deficit that occurs so long as Congress does not appropriate in excess of his budget."

Senate Vote On Economy

Here is the roll-call vote by which the Senate defeated yesterday the economy directive for President Truman by refusing to suspend its rules, a procedure requiring a two-thirds majority:

ability to lower costs and encourage exports to the United States and other hard currency nations, Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman said yesterday.

Hoffman, who returned Saturday from a European trip, said that devaluation of the pound will not be discussed at the Anglo-American - Canadian economic talks which are getting under way here. He said devaluation properly is a decision for the British alone.

Experts of the three governments preparing for the talks met twice yesterday in a State Department conference room to hear the British set forth in detail the background of their dollar crisis.

Commander-in-Chief Theodore A. Penland, 100, stayed long enough to receive a souvenir album of a special commemorative stamp from Robert E. Fellers, Deputy Third Assistant Postmaster General. Then, as the United States Marine Band started playing "Taps," he was led to a car.

7500 in VA Face Dismissal

000,000 for VA's Department of Medicine and Surgery which apparently means there will be no layoff among its 110,000 employes.

On the other hand, the medical department has "frozen" personnel and it must shift its present staff to service the 10,000 additional beds that will become available through new construction during the 1950 fiscal year. The department would have had to discharge about 7000 workers if it hadn't received the 16 millions.

The conference report said funds also were carried to pay the administrative cost of sending insurance dividend checks to about 16 million GI's which means this project can't be reduced.

Because of the budget language, VA officials apparently are being forced to absorb the deep budget cut among its 80,000 so-called administrative employes. Branch, regional, and local offices will be among those to be hard hit.

It was reported that VA's personnel offices must be cut back 30 per cent and similar service functions also are tentatively slated for deep cuts.

The 8000 cut in June was made among the same administrative employes. At that time career nonveteran employes with up to 30 years of service were discharged. Also, a group of amputee veterans with temporary status were fired. Since that time, Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.) persuaded the Senate to pass his bill to give veterans with major disabilities job security.

EXAM: The Civil Service Commission is accepting applications for these jobs: information specialist, $3727 to $4103 a year; information and editorial clerk, $2974 to $3351, and proofreading clerk, $2974.

REORGANIZATION: Chairman Harry B. Mitchell is putting new life into the Civil Service Commission. He revealed yesterday that:

1. Civil Service regulations will be simplified. He promised that hereafter the regulations would be put into language that can be easily understood;
2. Steps would be taken to encourage the adoption of promotion programs to insure that all qualified workers are considered for advancement when vacancies open up;
3. Commission letters would be written in more concise and simple language, and,
4. The commission's test development section will be enlarged so that written tests will produce qualified employes with greater certainty in a shorter period.

Best of luck to the chairman on his worthy projects.

Senate Gets Stripped Minimum Wage Bill

By The Associated Press

A minimum wage bill "stripped to the bone" to avoid a long fight was brought up in the Senate yesterday. Its main provision would raise minimum wages from the present 40 to 75 cents an hour.

Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) told the Senate that in order to get this provision past Congress, the Senate Labor Committee had sidetracked other controversial provisions and had abandoned efforts at this session to broaden coverage under the wage-hour law.

Army to Aid Idle Areas

Board "pilot studies" in two such areas—Muskegon, Mich., and New Bedford, Mass.—"to determine if any items in the current procurement programs of the Army, Navy and Air Force can be manufactured in those areas."

The announcement said that the Munitions Board, with concurrence of Comptroller General Lindsey Warren, had adopted a "general policy" covering awards of bids to firms in distressed areas.

Where "the bid from the distressed area is as low as any other bid from an area not distressed," the award can be made to the former, it was said. This would control, it was made plain, only where equal bids are involved. Otherwise the lower bidder would receive the award.

Also, under the Armed Services Procurement Act of 1947, certain types of orders can be placed by negotiation rather than advertised bid. In such cases, it was said, the Munitions Board "approves placing negotiated contracts in the distressed areas, when authorized, provided that such placements are not to the disadvantage of the Government."

Negotiated orders are permitted in experimental, development and research work, as well as industrial mobilization contracts and other involving certain defense features.

The distribution of information about defense buying will be handled through the Department of Commerce. Procurement guides of the Army, Navy and Air Force, along with lists of military procurement offices, will be furnished the Commerce Department to pass on to local business groups in the areas where unemployment is acute.

Truman Is Hopeful On British Talks

they responded only rarely with applause. But they came to life with noisy enthusiasm when Defense Secretary Louis Johnson presented the President with the Legion's Distinguished Service medal.

Johnson recalled that Mr. Truman was the first Legionnaire with active military service to become President and spoke of his "simplicity, his humility, his charm, his humor, his devotion to his fellow Americans . . ." "In heart, in mind," Johnson added, "President Truman is the Private Truman of 1906, with added years; the Captain Truman of 1918 with added experience."

Accepting the medal, Mr. Truman raised a hearty laugh when he was "reminded that I have been in this hall before," recalling the bitter Democratic Convention fight of 1948. He expressed hope that he deserved the medal and said: "I shall treasure it highly and only hope I can live up to it."

World's Future at Stake

In his speech on the world economic crisis, Mr. Truman reminded his audience of veterans that the two World Wars in which they fought had made America "the most important economic unit in the world today."

The world's future, he continued, "depends upon the continuation of our own economic growth and development" and solution of international economic problems would be hastened "if we can continue to increase our national income and to raise our standards of living."

He recounted the measures the United States has taken since the war, in conjunction with other free nations, to attack the grave problems arising from the war. He told of "the still further difficulties . . . created when it became clear that the Soviet Union would not join us in working for world economic recovery," Mr. Truman continued.

A still larger task lies ahead, to accomplish this task, he said. The free nations have the means and resources, and in a narrower sense, he went on, the prosperity and security of the United States depend upon "a continually expanding and productive international economy."

"We cannot," therefore," he declared, "fall back into economic isolationism. Instead, we must take every action we can to bring about more trade, expanding markets, and growth and development in other countries as well as our own."

But, he added, the inability of other countries to pay in dollars for the goods, equipment and machinery which they need and which the United States must sell them, has thrown world trade "seriously out of balance." To meet this emergency, the President outlined a five-point program, present and prospective, in which the United States is and must continue to be the prime mover, this program includes:

1. Continuation of the European Recovery Program.
2. Encouraging American business to make increasing investments abroad whereby underdeveloped areas may procure the equipment they need.
3. Help people in underdeveloped areas learn modern industrial and agricultural methods: the "Point Four" of his inaugural address.
4. Continue negotiation of reciprocal trade agreements.
5. Encourage "closer regional ties among nations in order to lower trade barriers and increase production."

Already the nations of western Europe, he pointed out, are working toward closer regional ties. He cautioned, however, that this endeavor involves "a difficult period of transition for the countries that enter into it, but it is essential for a better world."

Then turning to the immediate problem of the forthcoming economic talks with Great Britain and Canada, Mr. Truman said:

"We look upon these talks as discussions among friends about problems which affect all of us, and in the solution of which we all have a common interest.

"The people of this country are well aware of what the war meant to Great Britain and of the stresses and strains which have been laid upon the British people in recent years.

"The representatives of the United Kingdom will find here a warm personal welcome and may be assured that these mutual problems will be examined by us in a spirit of friendliness and helpfulness." The President emphasized that the talks have as their purpose the strictly businesslike exchange among nations of goods and services.

The United States, he said, is "not engaged in a charitable enterprise" nor is it "looking for trick solutions to deep-seated problems."

Mr. Truman left his special train here at 11:45 a. m., wearing a blue suit, with an American Legion cap substituted for the straw hat he wore when he boarded the train in Washington at 9:25 a. m. He was met by ceremonial detachments of troops and sailors and received the 21-gun presidential salute as he walked out of the station to a waiting automobile. With him on the drive to the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel were Gov. James E. Huff of Pennsylvania, Legion National Commander Perry Brown, Defense Secretary Johnson, a former Legion national commander, and Senator Francis J. Myers (D., Pa.).

Guest of City

After the long motorcade had crossed the Schuylkill River, it was joined by the First City Troop, Philadelphia Guardsmen, on horseback and dressed in Colonial uniforms with black-plumed cuirassier helmets. The officers wore red coats. The troop formed the President's escort to the hotel.

There he was guest of the city at a luncheon where he spoke briefly. Mr. Truman mentioned the City Troop as a military organization which had escorted every President to visit Philadelphia since George Washington. It "made an old horse artilleryman homesick," he said, to see "horses once more in use."

Praising the orchestra and vocalists who had entertained the luncheon, the President remarked that he liked music and that "there are some people who think the country would have been better off if I had made music my career."

The presidential party arrived back in Washington at 6:15 p. m.

British Press Likes Truman's Address

London (Tuesday), Aug. 30 (AP). President Truman's Philadelphia speech set a good will policy for the coming dollar talks with Britain and Canada, the British press observed this morning.

The Times said the President's speech underlined "the good will and good intentions of the United States Government."

"The President has put the great issues at Washington into right perspective," the paper said. "He pointed the way, and the British - Canadian - American delegations will come together not to wrangle or to haggle but to seek practical remedies for disorders which trouble them all."

The Laborite Daily Herald said the President's statement of principles ". . . could hardly be bettered."

The Conservative Daily Graphic said:

"There has been a good deal of useless bickering on both sides of the Atlantic. But never once has a member of the American Government joined in. The attitude has been just the opposite, and it is expressed again in Mr. Truman's speech to the American Legion."

Damage by Storm In Area Is Slight

Greater Washington felt the tail of the Florida hurricane as it hurried through shortly after midnight yesterday, but no serious damage was reported.

Power failures provided the major portion of the damage, but a Potomac Electric Power Company spokesman described them as "nuisance damages"—troublesome but not serious.

According to the Weather Bureau, the wind reached a maximum velocity here of 54 miles at 12:42 a. m. Most of the time, however, the velocity was much lower. The total rainfall was .98 inch.

Power Failures in Virginia

In nearby Virginia, R. C. Hopkins, division manager of the Virginia Electric & Poker Co., reported scattered power failures in Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax, but only one concentrated blackout—in the heavily populated Presidential Gardens section—of a half-hour's duration.

Hopkins said 60 men worked throughout the night to repair all breaks.

Pepco had 75 breaks, Robert W. Wilson, executive assistant to the company's president, said. They occurred in a wide area extending from Rockville in Montgomery County to Cheltenham and Rosaryville in Prince Georges. Pepco kept 140 men working in 21 emergency crews until late in the afternoon yesterday making repairs.

Girders Twisted Free

A 33-foot cabin cruiser, owned by Herbert E. Hurley, 106 Summerfield rd., Chevy Chase, slipped its mooring in the Washington Channel. Washed against the seawall, it was left partially submerged.

Steel girders of a building under construction at the Arlington County Property Yard in the Shirlington Shopping Center were twisted free from their bolted connections, partially dismantling the superstructure. Arlington officials, however, minimized the damage.

Planes were lashed tightly to their moorings at the Naval Air Station and Bolling Air Force Base, with no damage reported.

Air Schedules Interrupted

Some slight interruption to air schedules was reported at National Airport, but no damages to planes or installations.

Two radio stations were off the air for brief periods by power failures. WMAL's AM transmitter at Bethesda was silent for 48 minutes after its scheduled 6 a. m. resumption of broadcasting, and WQQW's transmitter at Falls Church went dead one minute before its midnight signoff.

Police precincts inside the city reported a total of 28 trees blown down and 23 wires broken. The number of broken limbs could not be estimated.

Hurricane Fades Out Into Rain Over Maine

The hurricane which roared up the East Coast after lashing Florida finally collided with a cold front moving leisurely down from Canada yesterday and dissolved into gentle rain for Maine's parched fields and woodlands.

Reports from Maine say the rainfall should help the forest fire situation there where approximately 10,000 acres were being scorched by 15 separate blazes.

The hurricane-hit section of Florida, meanwhile, was declared a "disaster area" by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and plans were being considered for setting up a disaster loan office in the worst devastated areas. The Farmers Home Loan Administration also announced it would accept loans for disaster rehabilitation there.

Estimates of damage in southeast Florida range from 40 to 50 million dollars, although weather officials place the loss at less than the 1928 hurricane. Loss to the citrus industry was placed at 25 to 30 million dollars, or 13 to 17 million boxes of fruit.

The Red Cross, which has opened disaster relief offices in West Palm Beach, reported 383 buildings destroyed and 14,698 damaged in Palm Beach County alone. A total of 13,282 homes were reported damaged.

The latest Red Cross tabulation showed one man killed and 94 persons injured in the storm's wake through Florida. The death was attributed to drowning.

4 Polio Cases Reported; Area Total Now 110

Four new cases of polio were reported yesterday in Greater Washington bringing to 110 the total of cases this year.

An 11-year-old girl from the 3400 block of 10th pl. se., the District's forty-second case, was admitted to Walter Reed Hospital on August 19.

At this date last year there were 49 District cases reported.

A 40-year-old man from Forestville, Md., was admitted to Walter Reed Hospital Sunday, Prince Georges County health authorities reported.

Two youngsters from Falls Church were admitted to Children's Hospital, a 2-year-old boy from the 800 block of Monticello dr., and a 5-year-old girl from the 600 block of Monticello dr.

Area Polio Record

The total cases reported by sections in Greater Washington this year follow:

District—42.
Prince Georges County—29.
Montgomery County—14.
Arlington County—11.
Alexandria—8.
Fairfax County—8.

Painter Gets Year's Probation For Beating Son, 2, With Belt

A 25-year-old painter was placed on probation for a year yesterday after he was found guilty in Municipal Court of beating his two-year-old boy.

The whipping was done with a belt Friday because the child, Earl Smith, refused to eat an egg during a meal. The father is Robert J. Smith, listed in court papers as living at 200 E st. nw.

Judge Aubrey B. Fennell of Municipal Court imposed sentence after lecturing Smith at length on his "tremendous" responsibilities to his family. Smith has a wife and three children and is unemployed due to an infection in the stump of one of his legs, lost in an accident.

Smith admitted the beating, and said he had been drinking.

Fund Trustee Re-Elected

Tulsa, Okla., Aug. 29 (AP).—Tom Baldridge of Winchester, Va., has been reelected to a three-year term as a trustee of the National Junior Chamber War Memorial Fund, an endowment of more than a quarter million dollars for the training of young men. The fund is dedicated to the dead of World War II.

Announcement also was made of the appointment of Joseph Saunders of Alexandria, former Virginia Junior Chamber president, as consulting architect.

Envoy Fetes Howard U. Actors

The Norwegian ambassador Wilhelm Mundthe de Morgenstierne, terday gave a bon voyage party at the embassy for the Howard University players who will sail from New York Wednesday for a series of performances in Norway, Denmark and Sweden.

Morgensteirne's remarks brought out the fact that the actors will live in the homes of students and faculty members in the Scandinavian countries.

Their tour, he said, would constitute living international relations on the finest possible scale.

Insurance Refund Tips for Veterans

A Veterans Administration spokesman gave veterans two pointers for filling out application blanks for the GI insurance refund yesterday:

1. Permanent mailing address should be a place where veteran can be reached by mail at any time in the next six months.

2. It is not necessary to state insurance policy number. The veteran's serial number will be enough. If he had two serial numbers, he should be sure to include both.

Distribution of the forms began yesterday at 59 post offices, veterans' organizations, central and regional offices of the Veterans Administration, Red Cross chapters, and the Veterans Information Center.

VA will distribute the three-part forms to business firms and Government agencies on request.

Most of the approximately 146,000 World War II veterans in Greater Washington are believed to be eligible for the refund.

Throughout the nation, about 16 million World War II veterans who hold or have held National Service Life Insurnace for three months or more will share in the 2.8 billion dollar dividend. Payments will begin in January, 1950, with VA planning to mail 200,000 checks a day until the job is finished.

The amount each veteran will receive is based on the face value of his policy, the length of time he kept it in force, and his age when he took it out.

The precise formula for determining individual refunds is still being "perfected," a spokesman said. While there will be great variations, the average veteran will receive about $175, on the basis of current estimates of those eligible.

Production Real Crisis of World, Milo Perkins Says

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Aug. 29 (AP).—The real crisis in the world today is one of production rather than one of fiscal proportions, business consultant Milo Perkins said here today.

Perkins, former marketing director of the Department of Agriculture, addressed the fourth annual convention and 51st annual meeting of the Tea Association of the United States.

"The basic trouble in most countries outside the United States," Perkins said, "is the inadequate output of goods and the high costs of production." He continued:

"If the rest of the world has to wait to generate its own capital to multiply human muscle power through investment in plant and equipment, it will take several centuries to do the job of increasing production.

"If private capital from this country could flow outward on a broad basis to the rest of the world, however, we could greatly shorten the decades necessary to reach our goal."

Hamley Goes To Supreme Court Post

A Bethesda resident has been named to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington.

He is Frederick G. Hamley, 4529 Middleton lane, who was appointed to the post by Gov. Arthur Langlie over the weekend.

Hamley

Hamley at present is general solicitor of the National Association of Railroad and Utility Commissioners composed of State and Federal regulatory officials. Hamley, his wife and two children moved here in 1943.

Prior to that, he was director of public service of the State of Washington. He will depart with his family for his new post on August 31.

Hamley attended the University of Washington and graduated from its law school in 1932. While there he edited the Washington Law Review, was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and the Order of Coif, a national law honorary society.

From 1932 to 1938, he was engaged in private practice in Seattle. From 1935 through 1938, he was also a member of the Seattle City Council.

For a brief time during 1938, he served as superintendent of the Seattle water department and chairman of the board of public works.

In August of that year, Hanley accepted a position as assistant district council with the Bureau of Reclamation at Grand Coulee Dam. He resigned in 1940 to become a special assistant attorney general and personal legal adviser to Governor Langlie.

In 1941, he was appointed director of the State of Washington's Department of Public Service, also chairman of the State Highway Advisory Committee and a member of the Governor's Emergency Executive Staff. In 1943 he was named to his present position.

machinery and equipment for its lead, copper and zinc mines.

Under the proposal, the loan would be repaid by Yugoslav shipments of strategic metals to the United States. Lead, copper and zinc are among the materials being stockpiled by this country for use in the event of an emergency.

Approval of Yugoslavia's loan bid would be the second big step taken by the United States to help Marshal Tito and his government remain independent of Moscow. Two weeks ago the Administration gave Yugoslavia permission to buy materials for a steel mill from an American company.

Export-Import Bank officials confirmed that the Yugoslav government has submitted a formal application. But the Yugoslav Embassy issued a terse "no comment" when questioned about it.

Bank officials said the loan application is getting "serious consideration" and that a decision will be forthcoming shortly.

Yugoslavia applied for a loan at the International Bank several months ago. A mission from this international lending agency is now in Yugoslavia conducting an on-the-spot investigation of Yugoslavia's economy before making up its mind. It is scheduled to return in October.

Arbitrators Picked in Transit Pay Dispute

Three Yashington lawyers were selected yesterday as members of the arbitration board which will try to settle the wage and contract dispute between the Capital Transit Co. and 4300 union operators and maintenance men.

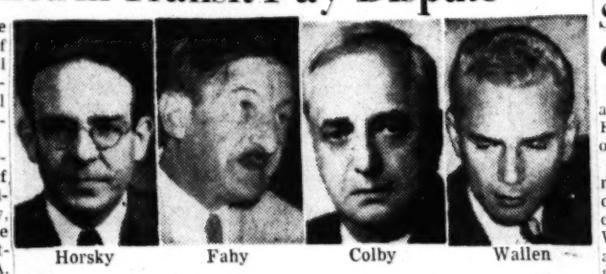
They are Alfred A. Colby, secretary and member of the board of governors of the National Academy of Arbitrators; Charles Fahy, former solicitor general of the United States and State Department adviser, and Charles A. Horsky, former Department of Justice attorney in a number of labor cases for the National Labor Relations Board.

The three were chosen from a panel of seven names submitted by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service to the transit company and the union, Local 689, Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes (AFL).

4 Names Struck Off

The selection was made when four names were struck off the list of seven, two by the company and two by the union, at a meeting held yesterday at the company's offices.

The three will be joined on the final five-man board by two arbitrators who already have been named by the parties in the dispute. They are John Curtin of Simpson & Curtin, Philadelphia labor advisers to the transit industry, representing the company on the board, and O. David Zimring, of the Labor Bureau of the Middle West in Chicago, legal advisers to labor organizations, representing the union.



Horsky Fahy Colby Wallen

General Manager Samuel E. Emmons of Capital Transit and President William F. Simms of the union sent the three arbitrators' names to Cyrus S. Ching, head of the Mediation Service in a joint letter.

The Mediation Service will notify the arbitrators, who will organize and begin hearins on the dispute possibly in about a week.

The agreement to arbitrate averted a strike scheduled for last July 1, which would have tied up Capital Transit bus and trolley transportation. The union employes were asking an increase of 25 cents an hour. The company wanted "economies" in operations to save $500,000 annually, and informally offered a 5-cent-an-hour raise.

Colby, who is 63, has arbitrated over 40 cases, many of them in oil refining, pipe line and chemical industries. He is regarded as the founder of the Academy of Arbitrators. He lives at 5301 8th st. nw., and his offices are in the Chandler Building.

Besides having been United States solicitor general and State Department adviser, Fahy, who is 57, has directed the legal division of the military government in Germany and was on the legal committee for the United Nations General Assembly. He lives at 5500 Chevy Chase pkwy. nw., and his offices are at 1625 K st. nw.

Seller of Bibles Sought by Police On Theft Charge

A woman who identified herself as a "messenger from God" selling Bibles, turned out to be a victim of temptation yesterday.

Mrs. Edith Butler, 901 11th st ne., told police the "messenger" came to her door bearing blue candles, Bibles, and a "message." When Mrs. Butler went to answer a telephone call, she told officers, the "messenger" decamped with $60 worth of cash and clothing. Police circulated a grand larceny lookout.

"I didn't have a chance to tell her," Mrs. Butler said, "that I wasn't going to buy a Bible from her. I have one."

Red Nations Plan New Drive on Tito

Assails Catholics

Czech Chief Shows Might To Slovaks

Zvolen, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 29 (AP).—President Klement Gottwald, speaking in the heart of Catholic Slovakia, said today the Roman Catholic hierarchy was leading the anti-Communist fight in Czechoslovakia.

Gottwald's speech was underlined by a display of Czechoslovakia's armed might, as he warned that neither the Catholic Church nor "other reactionaries" could stop communism. He said the government had learned how to combat reaction.

The Czech President spoke before a crowd of 100,000 which included a claque of men and women who cheered whenever he praised Russia.

Three Western newsmen who were taking notes on a parade before the speech were ordered to report to police headquarters where they were released after establishing their identities. They were Dana Adams Schmidt of the New York Times; Sydney Brooks of the British Reuters Agency and John R. Higgins of United Press.

Gottwald, his face pink in the broiling sun, said the Catholics were leading an anti-Communist fight behind a "smokescreen of religion" and said, "We will not allow anyone to disrupt our Republic. We know how to put an end to reaction as we did in February."

He referred to the Communist February, 1948, coup when many political opponents were thrown into prison.

As he uttered his warning against the church. The bells of the town church tolled, drowning out some of his words. It was here in Slovakia that Catholic peasants fought with pitchforks last June to protect their priests.

Before he spoke, Gottwald reviewed a long military parade through the town square of this city, one of the center sof the Slovakian uprising against the Nazis in 1944. It was in memory of this uprising that Gottwald spoke.

London, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—Russia and her satellites have agreed at a three-day meeting in Sofia on new action in an attempt to crush Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia, diplomatic reports indicated tonight.

A communique issued in Sofia said Russia, Albania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland and Romania held an "economic" conference August 25 to 27 and "took the necessary decisions."

Diplomatic information in western capitals is that the meeting was political and military in nature as well as economic, and that it was called because Russia is anxious over her failure to cow Tito.

Early moves to make the economic boycott of Yugoslavia complete are expected here.

The Economic Council of Mutual Aid was organized by the Bureau of Information Cominform last January as an Eastern European equivalent of the Marshall Plan. No formal meeting of the council had been announced previously.

The Sofia meeting was attended, it was stated, not only by such leading political figures as Ana Pauker, Romanian Foreign Minister, but also by military chieftains.

Diplomatic reports from iron curtain countries say Russia has been warned that unless Tito is crushed there may be serious disaffection in other Communist nations. Purges in Hungary and Bulgaria have disclosed there are other Communist leaders who, like Tito, balk at complete Russian domination.

Plan Is to Liquidate Tito Soon, Berlin Hears

Berlin, Aug. 29 (AP).—Western intelligence agents received reports today that the Soviet government is resolved to use any measure short of war to liquidate Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia.

The reports, originating among Germans friendly with Russian officials in eastern Germany, said an attempt will be made to dispose of the defiant marshal within six months.

The information cast doubt on speculation that Russia may lead her satellites in a direct attack on Yugoslavia. A Cominform-inspired revolt with Yugoslavia, or a plot to assassinate the Yugoslav leader, were described as the more likely methods.

firmation we have the votes to repeal the tax law if we can get it to a vote."

Majority Leader Lucas (D., Ill.) has promised the bill will be brought up but has indicated he fears a filibuster by Wiley and other dairy State Senators. Lucas, whose State includes city consumers and soybean growers (soybeans are an oleo ingredient) as well as large dairy herds, did not vote on yesterday's roll call.

Four pairs among Senators on both sides indicated that 49 Senators, an absolute majority, are on the oleo side of the argument. Senator Taft (R., Ohio) who voted with the butter bloc yesterday said later he intends to vote for tax repeal. He said he personally prefers to buy butter and thought the Army should buy it, too.

Newspaper Guild Executive Sues New York Local

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Executive Vice President Sam Eubanks of the CIO American Newspaper Guild said today he has filed a $150,000 libel suit against officials of the guild's New York local.

Eubanks said his complaint states he was accused by local executive board memberds of "collusion with management of the New York Post Home News to frustrate collective bargaining."

Britain Orders 1 Pair Of Glasses Per Patient

London, Aug. 29 (AP).—In an attempt to cut down the backlog of orders for free glasses, the Minister of Health announced today it will give each patient only one pair for the time being.

Every patient has been receiving two pairs. More than three million are waiting to get theirs. Some have been in the lines more than six months.

4 Arab States Demand Israel Give Up Land

Lausanne, Switzerland, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—Four Arab states demanded today that Israel give up territory her armies had won, in return for resettlement of Arab refugees Israel refuses to repatriate.

The demand came from Egypt, Syria, Lebanon and Hashemite Jordan. They handed a note to this effect to the United Nations Palestine Conciliation Commission.

The memorandum also said the Arabs want the internationalization of Jerusalem and the surrounding region, including Bethlehem. Israel wants internationalization confined to the holy places.

Arab sources said the note demanded Israel withdraw from parts of Palestine awarded to the Arabs under the United Nations partition plan, which the Arabs originally rejected. The Israeli army subsequently captured parts of western Galilee, Gaza and other regions awarded to the Arabs.

Rucker Declines Arlington School Counsel Request

Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker yesterday turned down a request by the Arlington School Board that he act as its official legal counsel.

Rucker was requested to take on the duties, following the August 10 resignation of former School Board Attorney Frank L. Ball, jr.

In a letter to Board Chairman Barnard Joy, Rucker stated: "My duties as Commonwealth's Attorney are increasing . . . In justice to myself and to the School Board . . . I cannot absorb the intricate and varied legal problems of the School Board.

"These matters do not come within the realm of the duties required of the Commonwealth's Attorney by law, nor could I lawfully receive compensation for performing (them)."

Grand Central Plans Novel Address System

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—"Train leaving on Track No. 9, the Dodgers are ahead and the weather's fine."

Passengers soon will be hearing something like that over the Grand Central Railroad terminal's public address system—according to plans announced today.

E. B. Moorhouse, terminal manager, said if things work out the address system will include music, news flashes, time signals, weather reports, baseball scores and train service.

State Dept. Denies Mexican Loan Approval

The State Department denied yesterday that it had agreed to approve a $203,000,000 Mexican oil loan if Mexico would first settle a multi-million dollar private claim.

The denial, made by a spokesman, was occasioned by a settlement that Representative Wolverton (R., N. J.) put into the congressional Record last Friday. Wolverton said there were rumors that the department had conditioned a loane on settlement of a $300,000,000 claim brought by the Sabolo Transportation Co. against the Mexican Government.

mission to be "geared together in a dynamic combination."

President Truman has a greater interest in the city than any other President in modern times, it was said.

High among the projects which the Fine Arts Commission has opposed in recent years was President Truman's balcony addition to the White House, which the commission vainly fought.

When the plan to add the balcony was first broached, Chairman Clarke did not indicate disapproval to the President, but later he and the commission joined other critics in opposing it. This "switch" is said to have rankled the President.

In May President Truman allowed Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d to retire as chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission after serving about seven years without offering to renew the appointment. Hilyard R. Robinson, a Washington architect, was appointed to fill the vacancy.

David E. Finley, director of the National Gallery of Art, who was appointed to a second four-year term on the Fine Arts Commission in May, 1947, is the only member of the commission whose term does not expire this year.

The terms of William T. Aldrich, Boston architect, L. Andrew Reinhard, New York architect, and Maurice Sterne, Mount Kisco, N. Y., sculptor, expire within a few days. The term of Frederick V. Murphy, Washington architect, ends November 30, and that of Lee Lawrie, of Easton, Md., sculptor, ends December 5.

Dewey Asks For Robeson Riot Report

Albany, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—Governor Dewey today asked Westchester County officials for a report on Saturday's riot at Peekskill when 500 veterans staged an anti-Communist clash, and prevented a concert by Paul Robeson, Negro baritone.

Without waiting for a complaint, which Robeson and Congressman Vito Marcantonio said they were preparing, Dewey called upon county officials "for a complete report on the meeting."

The order came while the State Police were quietly making an inquiry into the riot.

Scores of telegrams reached the Governor's desk, but a spokesman said, "We have not received a single request for an investigation from any responsible source."

In his order, Dewey asked for a report from District Attorney George M. Fannelli and the county sheriff. He indicated there would be no further comment after directing his assistant counsel to prepare the order. Dewey is at his Pawling farm.

Menuhin Faces Suit in Britain On Concert Date

London, Aug. 29 (U.P.)—A British trade union threatened today to sue Yehudi Menuhin for breach of contract unless the violinist gives a concert on Yom Kippur, Jewish holiday.

Harold Holt, Menuhin's harassed London impresario, said it all started last March, when he and Menuhin signed a contract with the Motor and Cycle Trade Union for a contract October 2 at Manchester.

A few weeks ago Menuhin learned that Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement, falls on the same date. He wired Holt it would be "impossible for me to play."

The union has rejected other dates, and negotiations are deadlocked. A union spokesman said the hall had been sold out.

"Mr. Menuhin will be taken to court if he does not appear," he said.

strong it has been able to override Presidents Truman, Roosevelt and Hoover," Sabath added.

He noted that the Hoover Commission on Government Reorganization recommended transferring Rivers and Harbors functions from the Army to the Interior Department, but that Congress spiked that move and "left the Engineers entrenched in their powerful position."

He asserted that the Engineers undertake costly projects, paid for by all the Nation's taxpayers, which sometimes benefit only a limited number of private individuals. For example, he pointed to drainage of privately owned swamp lands, enabling owners to sell the land at a big profit.

Expert Advice

Assuming the role of a reformer, James V. Hunt has given fresh evidence of the qualities which made him so successful in his chosen profession as Washington representative of business interests seeking Government contracts. He has ceased to run with the hares and is now hunting with the hounds. Although too ill at the moment to appear in person before the Senate subcommittee investigating the activities of "5-percenters," he has submitted an affidavit protesting his innocence of any improprieties and proposing a plan to purify and legitimatize his interesting calling.

Mr. Hunt's plan, in brief, would be to require all Washington business representatives, except those employed full-time by a single employer, to register with the Department of Justice, disclosing the identity of all their clients and the terms of their compensation. He would happily, he says, be the initial registrant under such a regulation. But it is difficult to see how this would remedy in any way the evil alleged to lie behind Mr. Hunt's activities or behind the activities of other "5-percenters." The evil to be remedied is the sale of influence—that is, the obtaining of contracts and other benefits for clients through friendship with, or corruption of, Government officials. A registered representative could sell such an influence as readily as an unregistered representative.

The position of a business representative seems to us to differ from that of a lobbyist, now required to register by law, in that the former serves only a particular client in respect of a specific transaction while the latter is interested in procuring legislation which will affect the entire public. Disclosure of the lobbyist's sponsors serves to make clear an interest which may otherwise be disguised. But the interest of a business representative can scarcely be obscure, and disclosure of his clients could be only a pointless embarrassment. Moreover, it would be extremely difficult to distinguish between strict business services and legal services in which the lawyer-client relationship is justifiably a confidential one.

But these considerations and the merits of Mr. Hunt's plan can best be explored, of course, by direct questioning on the part of the Senate subcommittee. Since he has now assumed the status of an expert witness, as well as a witness in his own defense, there is all the more reason for insistence upon his appearance before the subcommittee as soon as his health will permit.

Aside from the threat to constitutional government, the revolution now disrupting Bolivia has two highly significant overtones: First, the revolt indicates a revival in considerable strength of the infamous MNR, or National Revolutionary Movement, which in 1943 fooled the State Department, Secretary Hull excepted. The MNR is the ideological child of nazism, and from 1943 to 1946 it ruled supreme in Bolivia under the brutal dictator, Gualberto Villaroel. Second, and by no means less important, the ally of the MNR in the current assaults is the Communist Revolutionary Workers Party. Here is a striking and tragic example of the unholy but natural alliance between extreme Right and Left for the purpose of liquidating popular government.

Although the rebels now hold five key cities in the southeast and the governmental counterattack seems to be somewhat inept, the situation is not hopeless. The question is whether the Urriolagoitia government in La Paz can meet the threat. It has a stern problem on its hands. For the MNR reappears like a cancer; and Bolivia has been under a form of martial law since May when bloody riots, supposedly instigated by the MNR, occurred in the tin mines.

What American diplomacy should be concerned about is the possibility of another foothold for fascism in the Western Hemisphere. The MNR is no mere resurgence of the caudillo type of dictatorial rule sometimes associated with Latin-American uprisings. It is aggressive fascism of an imported totalitarian stripe, as Villaroel demonstrated only too clearly until he was lynched in a student counterrevolution in 1948. Should the MNR be successful, it will find allies in the Peron dictatorship in Argentina and the military juntas governing Peru and Venezuela—regimes which show a thoroughly Fascist bent. In each of these countries the Communists, while pretending to oppose military rule, are making common cause with the oppressors against any democratic elements.

If the wave of military coups is to be stopped, it is not enough for the United States merely to maintain a detached disinterestedness. Not only must this country refrain from any move which might imply the sanctioning of aggression, it must actively support democratic regimes in their efforts to quarantine militarism. One positive step the United States can take is to abandon talk of an arms program for Latin America—a program which would alienate us from the people while giving the Communists their most useful propaganda tool.

Accent On Unity

The trial balloons that have filled the air since the British-American conference was announced are beginning to assume some substantiality. One is that political as well as economic difficulties will be discussed. Another is that these difficulties will not be discussed narrowly as between Britain and America but broadly as affecting the whole Atlantic community. These notions sound as if the conferees intend to have a thorough-going exploration instead of a look for poultices till the trading world settles down to a buyers' market.

There was a wrong accent in the administration of the Marshall Plan which should be the object lesson to the September 7 conferees. What has been insured by the Marshall Plan is not the recovery of Europe in the sense of the restoration of what former Secretary Marshall called "a working economy" for Europe, but the subsidization and the building up of separate economies for the nations of Europe. They all want to be self-sufficient in agriculture. They all want their own oil refineries, their own steel industries. And Marshall money has helped to give the separate countries these paraphernalia of independence. In so doing it has promoted jealousy. Witness the intra-European argument in the OEEC, or Organization of European Economic Cooperation, the allocating agency in Paris for Marshall Plan appropriations. Britain's implied request for a bigger slice of the pie has evoked some harsh words in continental Europe at the expense of Britain.

The development of autarchy, or separate economies, is not the bargain that was struck when the American people decided to finance the Marshall Plan. It was certainly not the reason that this newspaper backed the Marshall Plan. What has happened, in point of fact, is directly contrary to our hopes and expectations. The rush for self-containment has succeeded only too well, and Britain, in particular, appears to have been digging in behind what the London Observer calls it "siege economy"—an economy bristling with bilateral agreements, quotas, an inconvertible currency, and bulk purchases of government agencies.

The same separatism is being invited in the arms program. If this country subsidizes a munitions industry in France, and the title is French, then there is bound to be envy elsewhere. Other countries will want the United States to subsidize an arms industry within their borders. This and like difficulties could be avoided if the United States were to pin its policy to principles instead of to nations. If, for instance, a firm stand had been taken for unity in Europe, the quest for autarchy would not have been allowed to run riot in Europe. If a similar stand were taken on the title to arms and arms factories in Europe—insisting they shall be international, not national—then the unification of the military defense of Europe might be expedited.

We trust that in the forthcoming discussions the American delegates will be so guided by these considerations. On the political level Europe needs to understand, for instance, that the American tradition, let alone prudence in this changing world, is dead set against colonialism—against subsidizing the mania for fighting rearguard battles against destiny. It is scandalous that American arms have hitherto been used in combating unrest in Europe's colonies. If the Administration will not make it clear that this kind of cooperation is intolerable, Congress could insure that it will not happen again by attaching a declaration of intent to its vote for MAP. What is going on at Strasbourg, furthermore, should obtain what it has so far lacked—the enthusiastic approval of the United States. Though Strasbourg is a talk-shop, the nations are talking of setting up, in place of or as an adjunct to the purely coordinating agency known as OEEC, a permanent economic commission of the Consultative Assembly, so as to consider a joint attack on Europe's dollar deficit, its tariffs, its inconvertible currencies.

Medicine Show

The American Medical Association seems to have forgotten nothing and learned nothing from its long thralldom to that remarkable publicist Dr. Morris Fishbein. It has now put its public relations in the hands of Clem Whitaker and his wife, Leone Baxter. It was Clem's double-twist inspiration of furthering the AMA's "educational campaign" against the Administration's health insurance program by inviting Washington reporters to a luncheon the other day and telling them that the AMA has been subjected to terrorism by the FBI.

It appears that the FBI made inquiries in Chicago, which were completed in June, at the request of the Justice Department's anti-trust division in connection with a charge of restraint of trade growing out of an anti-trust indictment of the AMA in 1938. To Mr. Whitaker, this could be construed only as a reprisal. "If there ever was an attempt to terrorize a profession by those in power or hungry for power, this was it," he said. Well, if there ever was an attempt to publicize a profession, no matter how unfavorably, by those who pass for public relations experts, this, we should think, would be it indeed.

The AMA is a body with a great deal of public service to its credit, made up of men who, individually, have contributed invaluably and with tremendous generosity to the public welfare. Undoubtedly it has a story to tell and a case to be made against compulsory health insurance in terms of the achievements of voluntary health plans and the distribution of hospital and clinic facilities. If it would tell this story instead of whipping itself into a neurosis and attempting to terrorize the whole American public every time the Administration proposes a Welfare Department or a health program, it might win respect instead of resentment from its publicity. Isn't there a psychiatrist in the house?

Pooh Bah McCarran

The smallest State in the Union from the standpoint of population has the distinction of having contributed a one-man monkey wrench to the legislative process in Washington. We refer to Nevada's 73-year-old Senator Pat McCarran.

Officially Senator McCarran wields such power because he is chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, chairman of the ECA Watchdog Committee, and chairman of an important subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee. As head of the Judiciary Committee he is in a position to block judgeship appointments of persons whose patrons have incurred his disfavor. He has appointed himself the head of the Judiciary Subcommittee studying immigration and naturalization laws. In addition, he maintains a close liaison with Chairman McKellar of the Appropriations Committee and Chairman McClellan of the Executive Expenditures Committee, and the three together constitute the most powerful group in the Senate.

The record contains plenty of examples of McCarran obstructionism. For example, he has frustrated all DP legislation, although he has championed a measure needed by Nevada for the admittance of sheep herders. He personally sponsored an ECA amendment to include Spain, and threatened to cut State Department appropriations unless policy were brought in line with his thinking on Spain. He has used every means to force more money down the Chinese rathole and has not stopped trying—although Nevada's leadership in the 30's in the American decision to boost our Government price of silver began the debacle of Chinese currency.

It was Senator McCarran who accused United Nations Secretary General Lie of deliberately loading the U. N. with Communist spies. Operating out of his bailiwick, he released the names of persons smeared by Elizabeth Bentley, with no chance for them to answer. He threatened to subpena high Administration officials unless confidential executive files were furnished his committee. He fought to ban the appointment of any Government lawyer to a district judgeship. He helped engineer the vindictive Straus-Boke rider denying pay to officials of the Bureau of Reclamation. He even descended to the point of vetoing a claim presented by two Indian employes of the Bureau of Indian Affairs for redemption of a charge made against their salaries for housing which the Government did not furnish. The measure of the man was indicated by his crass comment that since one of the Indians in question had built an adobe hut out of mud, she did not come before the committee with clean hands.

Doubtless other members of the Senate are heartily sick of McCarran's domineering, but they are afraid to offend him. In the final analysis the problem of McCarran resolves itself into one of the seniority system, for it is his 17 years as a Senator that enable this solid-silver obstructionist to achieve positions of authority, and nothing more. Congress cannot do away with the McCarrans as long as voters elect them, but it can, under a more sensible procedure for allocating committee posts, protect itself against such arbitrary and throttling abuses of power.

Davis Cup

Australia's bid for the Davis Cup again failed, 4-1, but her representatives put up a gallant fight, even a memorable one. Who of the millions who, thanks to the miracle of television, shared the thrill of the Forest Hills crowd can forget Bromwich and Sidwell coming up from behind to win their doubles match with Talbert and Mulloy? This was the only match the Australians won. But it was outstanding—a historic exhibition of tennis, endurance and never-say-die. And the encouragement that the Australians got from the spectators was a high testimonial to American sportsmanship. It must leave the Australians a sweet memory of their unsuccessful challenge.

AUTUMN PAUSE

Sunsets are filled with smoke.
Countrymen look to the oak
To measure the strength of frost
That swept the fields with a stroke.

The hours of the day are crossed
By hours when the sun is lost
And the sun hangs heavy and low
Whipped by the wind, and tossed.

One day the sun will go
There will come the smell of snow
And a silence over the pines
And the waiting house below,

And the cold so long withstood
Will close at last as it should
And the snow begin to fall
And muffle the ax in the wood.

Dixiecrat Millstone

Though a Southerner born and reared in North Carolina, I should like to indorse the action of the retiring chairman of the Democratic National Committee, Senator McGrath, in barring Dixiecrat members from participation in the recent election of a new chairman.

For some time now it has been evident that the Dixiecrats, and others of their ilk, were out of step with the Democratic Party as it is constituted today. Observe, for example, the vote in the Senate on the reorganization plan of the Hoover Commission to consolidate the various health and welfare agencies of the Government into a new Department of Welfare. There, as on so many other occasions, the Dixiecrats joined the Republicans to insure the defeat of the Administration proposal.

The Democratic Party today, if it is truly to represent the liberal progressive elements which returned it to power last November, must rid itself of the reactionary taint of an appendage that still seems to channel its thinking back to the Reconstruction Days of the 1870s. I think it would be desirable for the Democratic Party to sever all working relationships with the Dixiecrats and allow them to drift, politically speaking, into their natural habitat.

Then it would be possible for the Dixiecrats to attempt to organize themselves as a permanent third entity on the American political scene; or, as is more likely, align themselves with their natural partners, the Republicans. In any case the Democrats and the country would profit by such a disaffiliation.

The last national elections proved that neither the support of the Dixiecrats, nor that of Wallace's pro-Communist crowd, was necessary for a Democratic victory. However, even had the Democrats not been successful, I should have deemed defeat preferable to victory with such an unholy tripartite alliance.

Finnish Exports

Your Canadian correspondent of August 28, Mr. Gilbert, had not seen the editorial in your newspaper, appearing the day before his letter, which effectively disposes of his contention that the strikes in Finland are due to the July devaluation of Finnish currency. According to your editorial, wages in Finland are adjusted according to a cost of living index, so that, if prices rose in Finland after devaluation, so did wages.

READER.
Washington.

Editor's Note: This is confirmed by our correspondent lately in Finland, Frank Gervasi, who writes: "The dockworkers' strikes in Finland have no basis in economic fact. The workers are well paid, their wages pegged to prices. Prices went up slightly with devaluation of the Finmark but, to the best of my knowledge, so did wages. That was in the agreement between the government and the Trade Union Federation. It's unlikely that the government, a Social Democrat minority, would risk its neck by violating the agreement."

Transit Radio

Sample questioning of those persons who ride the streetcars and buses which have transit radio installations has disclosed that less than 2 per cent of those polled actively object to the radios. Quite the contrary, a vast majority of more than 80 per cent affirmatively approve of transit radio, with the remainder of the persons asked not caring one way or the other.

Yet the majority of the letters appearing in the letters to the editor column express strong disapproval. Approximately 95 per cent of the letters filed with the Public Utilities Commission are letters of objection. It is this overwhelming proportion of complaints which has caused the PUC to determine to hold a hearing on whether the transit radio installations should be continued. At that hearing this minuscule 2 per cent of objectors will undoubtedly appear in swarms and talk at great length.

If the high-pressure tactics of this low percentage group are successful in causing transit radio to be removed from the streetcars and buses, it will be another melancholy example of the tremendous majority being ruled by the small, aggressive minority—government by the loudest shouters. It is not too late for those who enjoy transit radio to make their wishes known to the PUC.

Stalin-Hitler Pact

Last week was the tenth anniversary of the Stalin-Hitler pact.

Stalin paid a high price for his double-cross of the democracies. Hitler and not Stalin breached the pact, and like all immoral schemes Stalin paid dearly for his duplicity because Hitler conquered almost one million square miles of Russian territory before the American military supplies helped to stop Hitler's invasion.

This pact and Stalin's aid to Hitler under it should convince our "intelligentsia" that there is little or no difference between communism and fascism and that we must do everything possible to prevent Hitler's successor from succeeding in his plan for world conquest.

Defense Of Hongkong

With the Communists completing what is sure to prove a successful drive towards Canton, Hongkong and the leased territory will probably be in the limelight before long. For many years China has been agitating for the return of these areas and the Reds, still smarting under the casualties inflicted by H. M. S. Amethyst during her breakthrough down the Yangtze, are not likely to be any less insistent in the matter.

The attitude of Britain is reflected in the recent steps which have been taken to increase the garrison and although the frontier is still apparently under the control of the civil police the number of troops has been augmented with a view to taking over should the necessity arise.

A successful defense of the mainland would, of course, be difficult but Hongkong itself ought to prove impregnable so long as control of the sea and air is maintained, for the Hongkong batteries must outrange any artillery possessed by the attackers. A far greater menace is the possible existence of a powerful fifth column on the island. There is free access to all-and-sundry from China proper and many undesirables have in consequence infiltrated.

Surrender would be a major disaster, for it would be an incentive to further Communist adventures south and west and the birth of an "Ever Victorious Army" myth which would entail long and painful exploding.

Public Excluded

The public is excluded from the 5 per cent hearings. There is room only for witnesses and their attorneys, whose secretaries are excluded, and a section of the press in tiny committee Room 357, Senate Office Building.

The caucus room is closed, as are other committee rooms. On August 25 the public was turned away. By 10 o'clock Friday morning hundreds of people were turned away.

Are we to conclude that the use of 357 Senate Office Building is a considered measure to deny the public access to the hearings?

"German Sore"

In your August 26 editorial, "German Sore," you point out rightly that the allied dismantling policy is one of the Germans' principal grievances, which the new Allied High Commission will have to handle. Then you go on to advise that Americans, British and French help ease the work of the High Commissioners by not encouraging "nagging on the part of German politicians" on this score.

This is indeed a reverse-gear approach to a serious problem. It overlooks the fact that the problem is not the "nagging of German politicians" but that dismantling causes the nagging.

It may be pertinent to tell Americans and other occupants that they can help soothe the German by keeping quiet about dismantling. But it is highly impertinent to make such a suggestion from the viewpoint of the Germans, whose means of livelihood are being torn down and carted away, and who are fundamentally the primary party concerned in this matter. The hush-hush lullaby and sirup approach may be justified by the argument of tripartite national interest but the argument of national interest cannot possibly be couched in the language of legality, logic or economics.

Your praiseworthy concern for the prestige and power of Mr. John McCloy and his co-commissioners should not make you forget that their best chance for success in Germany depends not on curbing the Germans but on winning their cooperation. If they have to rely mainly on "firmness" they will have failed. Germany is no longer our enemy in anything except name. If we want to count upon Germany as a friend we cannot treat it as a slave.

Our best way to deal with Germany is to deal frankly and generously, with all sides speaking their minds and contributing their best thoughts and efforts toward practical procedures. Many people here and abroad, ranging from Walter Reuther, through Victor Gollancz and Herbert Hoover, to Winston Churchill, think that dismantling is a dismal and disastrous delaying block on the road to conciliation.

Whatever convenience might come to the authorities now in charge from the silencing of the critics of dismantling is a small advantage compared to the basic, long-range, international accommodation, which can be gradually but firmly approached by the free and constant expression of sincerely held beliefs based on inescapable facts.

The "German sore" can best be treated not by the censors' poulticing and bandaging, but by suppuration and exposure to the fresh air of controversy.

Washington Calling

Realities In Britain

AMERICAN officials who have recently visited London bring back word of a split in the Labor cabinet. It is a split over the timing of an election that will test the popularity of the Labor Party's wide-ranging welfare measures.

One group that is said to be headed by Herbert Morrison wanted an election this summer. The argument was for an immediate showdown with the Conservatives who have been blasting at the Socialist government, with Winston Churchill leading the attack. The alternative is to wait until the present Parliament has run its legally constituted course, which would put the election on the calendar for next summer.

The showdown-now faction argues that even a defeat is preferable to trying to cope with the present crisis. Let the Tories come in, so the argument goes, and they will have to administer the bitter pill of cutting down the British standard of living. Under those circumstances a Conservative government would not have a long lease on life.

But another and, apparently, the dominant group is for going on to the end of the five-year term. To throw in the sponge now would be cowardly evasion, this group insists. Furthermore, they do not trust the Conservatives in power.

This report does, however, point up the political dilemma of the current money crisis. On both sides of the Atlantic, the officials and experts who will try to work out at least a temporary solution must constantly be aware of the short political leash on which they will be restrained.

THE ANCIENT fable about the mice who decided the time had come to put a warning bell on the cat that was decimating their numbers expresses the political problem in Britain. The British people must be told that they are living beyond their means and that the betterment in the lot of some of the population has been largely thanks to a set of complicated government controls. Those controls have suppressed and concealed, but not eradicated the postwar inflation.

But who is to carry out this grim task? For a generation and more, the rank and file of British Laborites have been conditioned to believe that the coming of socialism would bring a host of benefits.

The harried managers of Britain's finance system speak wistfully of their favorite candidate in the Labor Party for the unwelcome job of belling the cat. That is Aneurin Bevan, Minister of Health. Even, the Welsh coal miner who has the charm and the flair and the emotional appeal of Lloyd George in his palmiest days, is the recognized leader of the left wing of the Labor Party. Bevan could never be suspected of the kind of "sellout" that the late Ramsay MacDonald was always suspected of by his Labor colleagues.

But whether the ardent Bevan would be willing to lead his party down the path of sobering and austere responsibility in the face of the desperate need of the moment, no one ventures to say. Such a move would go counter to everything that Bevan has proclaimed through his long and often stormy career.

HERE AT HOME, Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder, head of the American delegation, and Secretary of State Dean Acheson will be acutely conscious of Congress and the wide hostility to the Labor government exhibited in a section of the American press. It can be stated flatly that there is no intention to ask Congress for any further powers to meet the emergency. This may well be because it is pretty obvious that an impatient and weary Congress would be most unlikely to grant any additional power or authorization.

Acheson has on many occasions made his stand clear. The rock of his conviction is that cooperation with the United Kingdom and the British Commonwealth is imperative to the security of the United States. As a consequence, the Secretary has been the target of a resurgent isolationism that propagandizes against any more agreements with the hated British.

But how to carry out this cooperation, in view of Britain's dire plight, is something else again. Any proposal that the British experts feel is on a scale sufficient to correct the unbalance draining off London's reserves would have to be referred to Congress for approval. So what the men on both sides of the conference table are likely to come back to is a temporary truce that will carry Britain through the months immediately ahead.

Then the business of facing up to realities, political and economic, will have to begin in earnest. That is a process bound to cause pain and anguish. And the longer it is postponed, the more painful it will be.

Exorcised Devils

Congratulations to Bill Brinkley for doing such a good reportorial job on August 20, on the priest who freed a 14-year-old boy of possession by the devil. A grand piece of work on the part of The Washington Post, too, for giving the story the attention it deserved.

Hunt Pinups Picture Many Top Figures

If, as the Chinese say, a picture is worth 10,000 words, James V. Hunt wouldn't have had to do much talking when he had a prospective client in his office.

Hunt, "star" of the Senate's investigation of 5-percenters and influence peddlers ,has pictures on his wall which seem to add up to eloquent proof that he knows the right people in Washington. Most of them are autographed.

He has signed portraits of 20 United States Senators, 11 Republicans and nine Democrats.

Two of these happen to be pictures of Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), and Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.), who are on the subcommittee investigating Hunt. McCarthy's autograph is accompanied by the word "Sincerely," and Miss. Smith's by the phrase "Good wishes.'

On a table, by itself, is a photograph of the President, with the handwritten inscription: "Best wishes to Lt. Col. James V. Hunt. Harry Truman."

There is also a photograph of Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, White House military aide. This was presented before the aide got his second star, and the inscription reads: "To my good friend Col. James V. Hunt with all good wishes, H. H. Vaughan, Brig. Gen. U. S. A."

Hunt is now in Doctors Hospital with a heart ailment.

However, his attorney, Roger Q. White, invited reporters and cameramen to the Hunt suite of offices in the Barr Building yesterday so that they could see the impressive "gallery."

What prompted him to do this was a remark by Senator Smith over the weekend in a radio interview with Bert Andrews, chief of the Washington bureau of The New York Herald Tribune. In reply to a question by Andrews, who wanted to know if the presence of her picture on Hunt's wall meant she was a friend of Hunt, Mrs. Smith said:

"I have had some letters from people who said they were shocked to know that I had been associated with Colonel Hunt. Actually, I have met Colonel Hunt casually. He has never been in my office nor have I talked with him on the telephone.

Asked for Photograph

"He wrote in and asked for a photograph.

"You have been in Washington long enough, Mr. Andrews, to know that it is just an old congressional custom to give photographs to people who ask for them. I believe the revelations in the current investigation will make members of Congress more careful about whom they give pictures to.

"I think an inquiry should be made so the public could know whether Colonel Hunt actually knew many—or any—of the people whose pictures he asked for. I suppose most of the photographs were handed out as innocently as mine was given to him."

Attorney White wanted the reporters to see for themselves that many of the pictures were addressed to "Jim" Hunt. He said he would like to exhibit letters that came with many of them, also addressed to "Jim." But the letters, he explained, were tied up for the moment by the investigators on Capitol Hill.

Hunt's office, consisting of four rooms and a reception hall, is just across the hall from the office of Fulton Lewis, jr., who is represented in the gallery by a picture with the inscription, "To my good neighbor Jim Hunt, with best wishes."

Hartley Represented

Next to Lewis' picture, incidentally, is one of former Representative Fred A. Hartley, jr., New Jersey Republican. Hartley, co-author of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act is no hero to President Truman or to Hunt's "good friend," the White House military aide.

Attorney White, in talking to reporters about Hunt's pictures, said he was "99 per cent certain" that he was given the autographed portrait of President Truman by General Vaughan.

In telling how Hunt collected pictures, he quoted him as saying:

"I'd drop in on somebody's office and say, 'I've got quite a "rogues gallery" in my office and I'd love to add his to it'."

This indicated that Hunt often dealt with an official's secretary.

Attorney White said that Hunt wrote to ask for photographs, saying that his collection wouldn't be complete without a likeness of the particular official whose picture he sought.

The list of Hunt's photographs, together with the inscriptions, as released by his lawyer, follows:

Nehru Sends Elephant To Tokyo Children

Calcutta, India, Aug. 29 (AP). Indira, the elephant that Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru is sending as a gift to Tokyo children, left today for Japan on the S. S. Encho Maru.

Indian and Japanese keepers are accompanying the cow elephant on the 25-day voyage. Eight tons of rations, including rice, coconuts, banana tree stems and salt —were put aboard for Indira.

Vaughan to Testify Today In Influence Investigation

these from his prepared statement.

Asked how he knew this, the Senator merely observed that the committe had a good staff.

Senator Mundt (R., S. Dak.) said yesterday that he wants to ask General Vaughan whether he has "a blank check of authority" at the White House.

"Sometimes," said Mundt, "it would seem that he does. But I have a pretty good idea that President Truman knew nothing about a lot of Vaughan's activities we have been hearing about at the 5-percenter investigation."

Mr. Truman has had three White House news conferences since the hearings opened on Capitol Hill. He has been asked to comment at all of them.

On the first occasion, in reply to a question, the President said that his attitude toward General Vaughan had not changed in the slightest. The next time he read a statement asking that newsmen —and their editors—suspend judgment on General Vaughan until he had testified. On this occasion he also complained about closed hearings, saying that these were held particularly when the testimony was "friendly" to his aide.

Mr. Truman declined to comment at his news conference last Thursday, repeating what he had said before about waiting until General Vaughan had testified.

That was the day it was brought out that General Vaughan had arranged for Maragon to fly to northern Italy, bearing an Army permit that had to be authorized by the President. A notation on General Vaughan's letter to Mrs. Ruth Shipley, chief of the State Department's Passport Bureau, represented the military aide as saying that Mr. Truman was "personally interested" in Maragon's trip.

It also was brought out that day that Bennett, dealer in perfume oils and subsequently Maragon's employer, had flown to Europe on an Air Transport Command plane a few days after VE-Day.

General Vaughan provided Bennett with a White House letter asking that he be accorded the courtesies given to "American officials" abroad.

Bennett, just after his return, began ordering deep freezers for General Vaughan and his friends.

The Senators want to ask General Vaughan about several other episodes that have been highlighted in the hearings.

Housing Expediter Tighe Woods told the subcommittee the first week that General Vaughan had asked him to "please hurry up" action on a construction permit for the Tanforan racetrack in California.

Woods' photograph, incidentally, was among those seen on Management Counselor Hunt's wall yesterday. It bore the inscription:

"To Jim Hunt with fondest regards—Tighe Woods, Housing Expediter."

Herbert C. Hathorn, a former minor official in the Department of Agriculture, has testified that General Vaughan called him up on behalf of a molasses company—for which Maragon was working—and implied that he could either "help" him in his government career or "get" his job.

General Vaughan is expected to be the only witness today.

McCarthy Doubts Vaughan Will Cooperate

By the United Press

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) said last night that he was "shooting in the dark" when he questioned John Maragon on whether he ever had worked for gambling king, Frankie Costello.

McCarthy, a member of the Senate Committee investigating "5-percenters," made the statement during an interview over the National Broadcasting Co.'s "Meet the Press" television show.

A reporter asked if McCarthy had any basis for asking Maragon, former Kansas City shoe shine boy, whether he ever had worked for Costello when Maragon appeared before the investigators last Friday.

McCarthy first evaded the question and said merely that "we got an excellent investigating staff but we don't divulge anything unless we have it nailed down."

Just A Hobby

Hunt Author Of Lyrics to Three Songs

By the United Press

James V. Hunt, whose alleged activities as an "influence salesman" struck a sour note with Senate investigators, is something of a songwriter.

He has written the lyrics to three songs—"My Missouri," "A Niece of Uncle Sam" and "Prayer to the United Nations"—all published and copyrighted by Global Music, Inc., New York.

Hunt's songwriting talents were discovered by reporters and photographers who were invited to visit his offices yesterday to see for themselves his gallery of photographs of Capital notables.

They began asking questions as soon as they ran across a framed program of a White House summer concert which listed Hunt as the author of the song, "Prayer to the United Nations."

Paul D. Grindle, Framingham, Mass., businessman whos description of Hunt's alleged activities set off the entire inquiry, testified Hunt once told him he (Hunt) wrote a song dedicated to Margaret Truman.

Members of Hunt's staff said they wouldn't know—as has been rumored—whether the song "A Niece of Uncle Sam" was the one he meant.

Hecht Co. Nets $1.25 a Share In 6 Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Hecht Co. yesterday reported net income of $1,040,098 or $1.25 a common share for the six months ended July 31, compared with $1,066,532 or $1.29 a share in the same 1948 period.

S. M. Hecht

Net for the latest period was after provision of $776,922 for income taxes and after contributions of $376,800 to the profit - sharing and pension funds. Last year the tax provision was $826,610 and the profit sharing and pension funds took $378,150.

President Samuel M. Hecht said the stores achieved a new high in dollar volume for the latest six-month period with net sales of $37,855,426, against $37,095,300 for the similar 1948 period.

Second quarter sales, he added, were 3 per cent higher than the second quarter of 1948. For the three months ended July 31, sales aggregated $19,197,793 against $18,644,211 for the comparable 1948 period.

The Hecht Co. operates stores in Washington; Silver Spring, Baltimore, Annapolis and Easton in Maryland, and New York City.

TRANSIT: The 10.7 per cent decline in passenger traffic reported by Capital Transit Co. in the first seven months this year is almost exactly equal to the 10.6 per cent drop for the nation's traction lines. Nationally, the decline was attributed to three principal factors: the rise in unemployment this year, the increasing competition from autos, and the decline in short-haul-traffic resulting from increased fares.

ODD LOTS: The public as well as area dealers are invited to attend the 20th anniversary exhibit of Motorola products at the Shoreham Hotel today and Wednesday. Host is the Simon Distributing Corp. whose president, James H. Simon, said yesterday that the exhibit will be open from 7:30 to 10:30 p. m. both days . . . Steel output this week is estimated at 86.3 per cent of capacity, compared to 84.8 per cent last week . . . The Bureau of Mines reported that domestic copper production in 1948 totaled 834,813 tons, about 2 per cent less than in 1947 . . . Henry W. Anderson, board chairman of Seaboard Air Line Railroad, was silent yesterday on reports that he will retire from that post and be succeeded by Legh Powell . .

BUILDING: Washington building permits aggregated $42,780,194 in the first seven months this year, a gain of $13,125,164 or 31 per cent over the like 1948 period, Dun & Bradstreet Inc. reported yesterday. This city rose to seventh place in this respect among the leading cities, according to the research agency. Nationally, building permits totaled $2,180,346,246 in the first seven months, a drop of 5.5 per cent.

WORK SCHEDULE: An employer in the building industry contends that employes average one day off for each two days of work. H. C. Turner, jr., president of the Turner Construction Co. adds up 104 Saturdays and Sundays a year, 8 holidays and 10 vacation days to get a total of 122 days not worked. That leaves 243 work days out of the year's 365. In a letter to his employes he says the one-off, two-on ratio should mean "starting work promptly and working a full day." Against this, labor makes two points. One is that with fewer working hours employes are fresher and can produce more work per hour. The other is that management often wastes labor's time, keeps employes hanging around unnecessarily and doesn't provide work for them efficiently while they are on duty.

EXPANSION: Sinclair Oil Corp. announced today the start of a five-year $250,000,000 program to expand crude oil production. To start operations it has arranged with an insurance company for a 25-year three per cent loan of $50,000,000. Of this amount $5,000,000 will be taken down this year. Payments of principal start in the 21st year of the loan.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 29 (AP).—A boost in the Government buying price for cash wheat and expectations of flour sales to the Government gave wheat a firm tone on the Board of Trade today. Other grains also were higher, except rye which sank on scattered commission house selling.

Dealings in soybeans were active and these contracts moved over a wide range. They wound up with fair gains. At the low today, November beans were down 20 cents from the high of a week ago, a very severe drop which in itself caused some new speculative and investment buying.

Wheat closed ¾-1¼ higher, corn was ¾-1¼ higher, oats were unchanged to ¼ higher, rye was ¼ to 1 cent lower, soybeans were unchanged to 1 cent higher and lard was 32 cents lower to 5 cents a hundred pounds higher.

One on the Aisle—

The Little Taps Paramount Gold

By Richard L. Coe

CELLULOID GOLD buried in Hollywood vaults is being increasingly tapped.

Both the Little and the Dupont are soon to benefit from a deal between Paramount and Lopert Films, the import company now mushrooming in what the trade foolishly calls "the art field."

Next week the Little will present its first program from the Paramount vaults, "If I Had A Million," with W. C. Fields, Gary Cooper, May Robeson and Charles Laughton, and "Peter Ibbettson," with Cooper and Ann Harding.

A few days later, around September 9, the Dupont will tee off with two Marlene Dietrich films, "Shanghai Express" and "Desire."

All this reflects several things.

In the first place, it's recognition of Eric Johnston's—and many reviewers'—repeated observations that a goodly percentage of people just don't go to the movies, period. They used to, but have become bored with the "myths for children," as Gilbert Seldes refers to factory-made product in the September Atlantic Monthly.

By bringing back the best of the past and playing them in the "art" houses (for "art" read "adult"), Paramount is hopeful of regaining the lost sheep who've gone over to smaller theaters where more mature films are the rule.

This recognition by a major Hollywood studio that something should be done to attract lost audiences may eventually mean greater stress on maturity of viewpoint in the Hollywood films.

The Paramount-Lobert pact also works the other way, though neither Lopert nor Paramount nor even Seldes goes into it.

For much as we admire the better foreign films and their mature outlook, there aren't always enough of these to fill the theaters of the fast-growing "art" chains.

New York naturally is at the forefront of this adult audience field, but proportionally speaking, Washington also is up at the top. Counting the erratic policy of the Pix, there are five houses here which regularly play foreign pictures. But normally speaking, there just aren't enough top-flight foreign films to fill all the houses, of which the Lopert chain controls three.

People Not Nationalities

It would be pleasant to think, for instance, that "Henry V," "Hamlet," "Brief Encounter," etc., represent the average of European pictures, but they don't and no one in the picture game claims they do. I was amused, for instance, this summer in England, to find that a picture I expressly admired, "Tawny Pipit," was not particularly popular with the general British audiences.

So the better picture business boils down, not to any particular nationality, but to an increasingly vocative, adult audience which stays home in England, France and Italy as much as it does in America.

It is this audience which Paramount is seeking to find in the Lopert theaters and, judging from the brief tryout just started in New York, probably will find.

Other pictures which both the Little and the Dupont will be showing include Noel Coward's "The Scoundrel," Ben Hecht's "Crime Without Passion," "The General Died at Dawn," Stuart Heisler's "The Biscuit Eater," the phoenix-like Fields' "Mississippi," Mae West's "She Done Him Wrong" and Von Sternbergs "Morocco."

The Little-Dupont plan is to insert these at intervals throughout the year without departing completely from their policy of new films.

HELEN HAYES' week at Olney in "Good Housekeeping" (September 13) is entirely sold out by mail orders. . . . First of these were received as soon as the week was announced in May and more than $500 worth of mail orders has been returned. . . . There will be, as usual, 120 unreserved seats for all performances which won't be put on sale until half hour before performance time at the theater box office. . . . "It all goes to prove," Treasurer John Shields muses, "that weekly subscribers don't have to worry." . . . Which quote, Mr. Shields, is a plug!

"GWTW," or "Gone With The Wind," will be revived for a week starting Friday at the Pix . . . Another revival: "Keystone Hotel," with the Keystone Kops, at the Open-Air Drive-In on Route 1 next Sunday and Monday.

TONIGHT brings Susan Peters as Elizabeth Barrett Browning to the Olney in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." . . . Robert, the poet who set the poetess free, will be played by John O'Hare, the same John O'Hare who married Natalie Core, long popular in theater circles here and daughter of the brick-topped Mrs. Karl Core.

GENTLE HUMOR: Hugh Marlowe, Celeste Holm and Loretta Young in Clare Booth Luce's story of two nuns in Connecticut, "Come to the Stable," opening Thursday at the Palace

Baby's Mother Believed at St. Elizabeths

A 29-year-old woman who appears to be the missing mother of 10-month-old Sherry Bean, now being cared for by a Kensington (Md.) couple, was located last night at St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Dr. Addison M. Duval, chief of staff of the hospital, said the woman volunteered information about the child after hospital authorities suspected her of being the missing mother.

The baby girl is being cared for by Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Schmitz. They appealed for help in locating the mother after caring for the child for about seven weeks.

The child had previously been left in the care of a Falls Church friend of the Schmitzes and turned over to Mr. and Mrs. Schmitz when the friend became ill.

The only information known about the child was that her mother's name was supposed to be Mrs. Dorothy Bean.

Dr. Duvall said the woman told hospital officials her name was Dorothy Cobb Lewis but that she was separated from her husband and went under the name Dorothy Bean.

She said she had two children but one of them was with her estranged husband.

Dr. Duvall said she was under observation at the hospital although he did not indicate the nature of her illness.

The lead to the woman's whereabouts came from a restaurant operator who called The Washington Post and said he believed the baby's mother was a former employe of his.

At Meridan Hill Park

Nancy Coleman Pleasingly Heeds That 'Turtle's' Voice

NANCY COLEMAN and John Beal are doing well by Sally Middleton and Sgt. Bill Page on Meridian Hill Park's open-air stage.

Their play, of course, is virtually a modern classic, "The Voice of the Turtle," so much so that Author John van Druten isn't even programmed. It's also now revealing itself as a period piece, time: the late war years. Laughs are from memory, not immediate experience.

While the unexpected romance of the sergeant on a weekend pass may seem, by those of us who've seen it several times, to be a tale every theatergoer knows, last night's opening underscored the fact there are always people new to a play or, for that matter, new to "round" actors.

It is on this level that the Meridian Hill stage is of service in a hick town. There are all manner of things wrong with Meridian Hill as a substitute for live theater, most strikingly the necessity for stage mikes, which so deprive the voice of that real quality so much a part of live theater.

Identification

But the actors are alive and it is in this specific capacity that the live theater lives. Fortunately, both Miss Coleman and Beal are especially able in their roles. The result is that persons who know only films and their moronic baby brothers, radio and television, easily identify themselves with the roles the two stars act. There is that sense of communication between those on the stage and those out front, the essence of theater, even on the simple Meridian stage.

More than the sense of stage realism prompts an audience laugh illustrating this fact. Much was made, you may recall, when "The Voice of the Turtle" opened, that Sally juggled with "real ice cubes" in her stage kitchen. "Gee, whiz, ice cubes!" everyone marvelled, though stage realism is an old, old thing. Last night when Sergt. Bill Page sat on an obviously hard bed as obviously intended to be softer than his Army bunk, he got a quick, instinctive reaction from his audience. Yes, in the movies a soft bed is soft, or else they reshoot. So the laugh is spontaneous, felt by audience and actor together.

Stars Experienced in Roles

Having both played in the New York company after Margaret Sullivan and Elliot Nugent wearied, Miss Coleman and Beal are aware of their roles. Miss Coleman is splendid as the Misouri girl gone Gotham, sweet, charming, childlike and unchaste. Beal is easy and natural as the likeable sergeant.

Joyce Randolph is miscast as the predatory Olive Lashbrooke, too young, too schoolgirlish, too patently not Olive. Consequently the comedy is slow in getting underway, lacking as the early scenes do the contrast needed to make Sally instantly clear. In a three-character play which shows its sinews more baldly each time one watches it, this is not a good thing.

It also seems to me rather curious that, for an apartment which clearly is not "big" and "grand" as described, no one has taken the trouble to change a couple of lines making it "swell," or, heaven help me, "cute."—R. L. C.

Sunpapers Sign First Contract With News Guild

Baltimore, Aug. 29. (AP).—The A. S. Abell, publishers of the Sunpapers, and the local unit of the American Newspaper Guild announced today they have signed their first contract.

It covers about 225 news and editorial employes and is effective September 4 for one year. A top minimum wage of $93 a week is provided for editorial writers, cartoonists, department editors, senior copy desk editors and top rewritemen.

The scale ranges from $40 to start to $87.50 after five years for copyreaders, artists and photographers. The top for men covering District police stations goes only to $82 after five years.

The contract also provides a $5 raise for those who already make more than the minimums but did not get at least a $5 advance in the year ended in July.

Sick Leave, severance pay, three-week vacations after five years' service, and double pay for working five holidays also are covered in the agreement.

Indians Jolt Bosox Pennant Hopes, 5-2, 5-4; Cooper Decisions Ortiz in Stunning Upset

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

CASEY STENGEL, manager of the New York Yankees, could wind up with the pennant and ulcers. The latter appears more probable at this point. Stengel has his team on top, but one by one the props are crashing down and that last thud you heard was Tommy Henrich landing in the hospital.

It was the latest and ugliest blow for Stengel who has been rolling with the punches all season, even before the season started, in fact, when Joe DiMaggio came down with the heel that has commanded more space in the papers than Achilles'. At this point, with the stretch run facing the Yankees and the menacing Red Sox pounding along in second place, the man Stengel could least afford to lose was the tremendous Henrich.

POVICH

Before Henrich crashed into the wall at Comiskey Park on Sunday and fractured two vertebrae that will keep him out for the rest of the season, the Yankees had been afflicted with 51 separate cases of injuries. They had been a baling-wire cast all season, but got a big lift a couple of months ago when DiMaggio came back to the lineup.

And now DiMaggio is ailing again, and repeating his 1948 effort of staying in the lineup with pain in his every step. Until Sunday, there was an 18-day stretch in which DiMag had not hit a home run. He isn't the same DiMag who was rescuing games for the Yankees in July.

FOR STENGEL, the painful irony is that the injury to Henrich occurred after he was re-shifted to his right field job following the purchase of Johnny Mize to play first base. As a converted first baseman, Henrich was being frequently injured on plays around the bag, and it was with relief that Stengel found opportunity to move him back to the outfield where, supposedly, he would be safe.

Without Henrich the Yankees aren't the same good ball club. It was he who kept the Yankees in the league lead with his timely swatting in the first two months of the season. Over a two-month stretch, the Yankees never had a more valuable player. His hitting was responsible for something like nine of the Yankees' first 20 victories.

No manager of a league-leading club was ever on his mettle as much as Stengel in the last month of the season. Not only is Henrich kaput for 1949, and DiMaggio ailing, but Yogi Berra, No. 3 man in the batting punch department, is also sidelined with an injured hand. If Stengel can get his collection of cripples home in front, he will qualify not as the manager of the year but the Manager of the Century.

His Yankees weren't supposed to be up there in the first place, you know. The Red Sox or Indians were supposed to take it all. Stengel didn't have pitching, Charley Keller was at the end of his tether, there was no adequate Yankee first baseman, and DiMaggio was the only proven outfielder of the club. Beyond Vic Raschi and Joe Page, the Yankee pitching was dubious.

For Stengel it has been the kind of a season that would drive a less philosophic manager mad. Raschi, after reeling off 10 straight wins, went six starts before he could get another. Allie Reynolds finished only one of the first 10 games he won. Tommy Byrne perhaps best exemplified Stengel's travail with his pitchers. The other day, Byrne walked five Tigers and didn't last out the third inning. In his next start he pitched a two-hitter.

COUPLED WITH all of Stengel's troubles is the late-season rush of the Red Sox who at one point narrowed the Yanks' lead to 1½ games, and moved into strong contention after being 12 games off the lead. At a time when Stengel's pitchers are still staggering and his batting power is shot, the Red Sox all of a sudden are exhibiting the league's finest pitching.

There are signs that all of the Yankees' misfortunes have brought a switch in sentiment among the nation's fans who are now moved to pull for Stengel and his gang in sheer admiration for their game stand. They have repeatedly risen above the toughest kind of breaks.

Stengel has juggled, shuffled and manipulated his lineup with genius-like skill to keep the Yankees on top. You can't boo his sort of performance. Never did a Yankee manager since 1920 have so little to work with. The Yankees may not have their best ball team of recent history, but if they get home in front with Stengel's refugees from the wards, you'd have to say the Yankees have their best manager.

Jimmy Has Champ on Deck for 8-Count

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

With a fighitng heart larger than his 125-pound body, Jimmy Cooper recorded one of the most stunning upsets in Washington's boxing history last night by scoring a 10-round decision over Bantamweight Champion Manuel Ortiz in a non-title bout at Griffith Stadium.

Cooper, a 5-1 underdog, not only took every type of punch that the 32-year-old Ortiz threw, but even floored the colorful Mexican for a count of eight in the fifth round by way of turning in his sensational victory.

Referee Charles Reynolds and Judge Harry Childs voted for Cooper while the third official, George Fletcher, called it a draw. The Washington Post scorecard showed Cooper on top in points, 91 to 86, and by rounds, 6 to 4.

Cooper Camp Confident

Cooper and his handlers were probably the only persons in the Griffith Stadium gathering of 4185 who gave the 21-year-old local lad a chance against the veteran who taught Cooper how to fight when both were in the Army.

Knowing that only a knockout would avoid defeat for him, Ortiz threw everything he had at Cooper in the last three rounds, but the stout-hearted District youth not only weathered the constant salvo, but fought back just as viciously.

As if they hadn't given the throng enough for their money in the first nine rounds, Cooper and Ortiz stood toe to toe and slugged it out in a vicious exchange the last 20 seconds of the brawl, an exchange so torrid that it had every patron in the stadium standing and cheering madly.

Ortiz Goes Down In 5th

Cards' Late Rally Routs Braves, 8-2

Boston, Aug. 29 (AP)—Taking full advantage of every opportunity, the St. Louis Cardinals scored seven times in the seventh inning tonight in trouncing the Boston Braves, 8-2. Ron Northey clubbed a four-run homer for the National League leaders in their big inning. A crowd of 15,935 paid fans saw the Braves lose their third in succession to the flying Redbirds. The paid attendance for the year at Braves field now is 1,014,685.

Losses Drop Boston Four Games Back Of Yankees

Cleveland, Aug. 29 (AP).—The Indians swept a double-header from the pennant-anxious Boston Red Sox today, 5 to 2 and 5 to 4.

They won the second game in the 10th inning when Catcher Mike Tresh knocked in his first run of the year.

That gave the three-game series to the Indians and plunged the Red Sox to four games behind the league-leading New York Yankees. Cleveland pulled within 1½ games of Boston.

The 33,159 paid fans and 7002 nonpaying children had little hope that the Tribe would finish off the second contest in front. Ted Williams put the Red Sox ahead, 4 to 2, in the seventh inning with his thirty-fifth home run that scored Dom DiMaggio ahead of him.

Tresh Comes Through

But the Indians tied it up in the ninth when Bob Kennedy scored on a grounder by Pinch Hitter Hal Peck and Dale Mitchell singled to center, sending Bob Lemon home.

And in the 10th, Bob Kennedy shot a looping double in short right, sending Lou Boudreau, who walked, to third. Then Tresh, a weak hitter, came through with his single to score Boudreau and end the game.

Pitcher Bob Feller won the first game, allowing the Red Sox nine hits, and Earl Johnson was the loser. Al Benton, who came in on relief in the ninth inning, was credited with the second game. Joe Dobson got the defeat.

Feller's victory was his 13th of the season against nine defeats. Rapid Robert struck out five, walked only two and never was in serious trouble.

Nats Beaten In Ninth, 2-1

St. Louis, Aug. 29.—Don Kokos' ninth-inning single, scoring Roy Sievers, and the five-hit pitching of Cliff Fannin gave the St. Louis Browns a 2-1 victory over the Nats here tonight.

Mickey Harris gave up only seven hits, but three of them came in the ninth inning, and gave the Browns the one run they needed to win.

Wasted was Eddie Robinson's fifteenth home run of the season, which came with one out in the ninth, and enabled the Nats to tie the game.

Bob Margarita Scraps G. U. Spread, Installs 'T' Offense

By West McLean
Post Reporter

Head coach Bob Margarita at Georgetown University had 47 players out for the opening day of football drills yesterday which he devoted entirely to calisthenics.

Margarita in his first year at the helm of Hoya grid activities is installing the T and consigning Georgetown's traditional spread and single wing offense to the scrap heap.

He has five boys out for the important quarterback spot, headed by Lettermen Tom Hardiman and Bob Barry. Also fighting for the under-center slot are three sophomores, Bob Deacon, Frank Mattingly and Jack Jeun.

The first team seems at least adequate but then the drop-off in ability worries the young coach. To overcome some of these weaknesses he has converted former backs, Billy Rose and Connie O'Doherty, to guards to replace Jim Ricca and Johnny Berger, who have been shifted to the tackle posts.

Bob Fortunato and Tom Dolan are lettermen back at the tackle posts while Bill Orsini is the only lettermen to hold forth at a guard position.

In the backfield, Margarita has high hope for Johnny Preston, Babe Baranowski, who was out with a broken collarbone most of last year, and Billy Conn, also injured much of last season

The Hoyas are best fixed at center with Vic Banonis, Bob Kelly and Bob Keller all returning

Bums' Homers Beat Bucs, 5-1

Brooklyn, Aug. 29 (AP).—Duke Snider's tie-breaking single and homers by Pee Wee Reese and Jackie Robinson helped Brooklyn down Pittsburgh tonight, 5-1, and remain two and a half games behind the league-leading St. Louis Cards.

Banta and Chambers were engaged in a tight duel with the score tied at 1-1 as the Dodgers came to bat in the seventh. A walk to Roy Campanella, Gil Hodges' sacrifice and Snider's long single broke the tie.

The Dodgers added three more in the eighth off Reliefer Harry Gumbert. Reese led off with his fifteenth homer and Robinson followed with his fifteenth after Billy Cox singled an dtook second on Carl Furillo's sacrifice.

Tresh Comes Through

But the Indians tied it up in the ninth when Bob Kennedy scored on a grounder by Pinch Hitter Hal Peck and Dale Mitchell singled to center, sending Bob Lemon home.

And in the 10th, Bob Kennedy shot a looping double in short right, sending Lou Boudreau, who walked, to third. Then Tresh, a weak hitter, came through with his single to score Boudreau and end the game.

Pitcher Bob Feller won the first game, allowing the Red Sox nine hits, and Earl Johnson was the loser. Al Benton, who came in on relief in the ninth inning, was credited with the second game. Joe Dobson got the defeat.

Feller's victory was his 13th of the season against nine defeats. Rapid Robert struck out five, walked only two and never was in serious trouble.

680 Schoolboys Try for Jobs

Six of the 10 Interhigh football squads answered their first calls to practice yesterday and three more are expected to follow suit Thursday. Western, the only other team, will report to Coach Fred Mulvey on September 6.

St. John's parochial school also started yesterday while Gonzaga, Washington-Lee of Arlington and George Washington of Alexandria have already put in one week of work.

Johnnies at Thurmond

Over 380 turned out at the five public highs yesterday while Joey Gallagher welcomed 48 to St. Johns' practice sessions at Thurmond, Md. Yesterday's 430 swelled the total already out for practice to 680 at nine schools.

Sixty grid hopefuls greeted new coach, Lou Chacos at Central and a like number was on hand at the opening session under Roos

Bird Hunting Season Will Open Oct. 20

By Ralph Murdock

HUNTERS will get their first chance to try their shooting eyes on September 1 when both Maryland and Virginia open their rail bird (sora) hunting seasons.

Murdock

Maryland closes her season on October 20 and Virginia gets an extra ten days which ends the sport in that state on October 30. The limit on sora is 25 and on King rail and other species the law says 15.

It is extremely doubtful if any hunter will reach the limit on King rail in a single day for they are about as scarce as hen's teeth. Sora shooting should bring the most action.

Now for the dove season. Virginia gets under way on September 16 and closes at sunset on October 15. Maryland opens her season on September 1 and pulls down the curtain on September 30. Your limit on doves is 10 per day. Lest we forget, starting time is 1 p.m., daylight saving time and quitting time is sunset.

FIVE Washingtonians, George McCarty, Wilson Clark, Milton Clark, Jackie Clark and Cecile McCall selected Lewes, Del., for their fishing endeavors. A strong east wind in the morning kept the anglers on shore until 11 a. m. and destroyed their chances of getting in early morning trolling. In the afternoon their luck improved by landing 32 dolphin and 68 black sea bass. The reliable Capt. Harry Parsons was the skipper.

Robert M. Creamer of Brentwood, Md., informs us that excellent catches of channel bass are being made at Assateague through the surf-casting process. Creamer confines his fishing strictly to surf casting.

Peacock, Kallio Win Best Ball

Roger Peacock, Sligo Park, and Keith Kallio, East Potomac, combined for a best-ball 64 yesterday at East Potomac to win the pro-amateur tournament. Tee Gibraski and Hank Robison, East Potomac, carded a 65 to take second.

Charlie Bassler, Rolling Road, won the pro sweepstakes with a 33-36—69. Bobby Brownell, Chevy Chase, Eddie Semmler, Prince Georges; Hal Cross, unattached, posted 73s to tie for the amateurs' low gross award, while the net prize went to Wayne McGee, Bethesda, 86—17—69.

Barkovich Wins Municipal Golf

Joe Barkovich, who won the D. C. employes' golf tournament with a 71 last year at Indian Spring Country Club, was one stroke higher on the same course this year, but his 72 was good enough for first place in the first flight yesterday.

Second place went to John Murdock, who carded an 82.

Washington Favored by 13 Points

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Denver, Colo., Aug. 29.—The Washington Redskins' discovery that a football may be carried as well as thrown gets its second test of the season tomorrow night at the University of Denver Stadium, where opposition will be furnished by the Detroit Lions.

Slightly fewer than the 16,000 fans who saw last year's Redskin outing for the benefit of Denver Post Charities, Inc., are expected for the fourth renewal of the pre-season fixture. They will be expecting to see the 'Skins, quoted as 13-point favorites, do somewhat better than in '48 when the Chicago Cardinals smashed Washington forces, 46-20.

Different Offense

Whatever the final result, however, spectators will be treated to a view of an entirely different sort of Redskin offense.

This is no frenzied passing team, such as the one which came to Denver last year. Two major items account for that: (1) The fact that Washington's pro hopefuls, instead of having six top backfield men hurt like last year, are without a single important injury at this point, and (2) the Redskins have the brightest gang of ball-carrying prospects in yea

The Redskins' 34-28 victory over the Los Angeles Rams proved the second point and also Head Coach Billick Whelchel, himself a newcomer, will be using his speedy ball-carriers for all they're worth.

Only 22 Passes Thrown

Washington had possession of the ball in the Los Angeles game for 82 of the 140 plays from scrimmage. That in itself was a big step toward victory. But with the greatest passer of them all, Slinging Sammy Baugh, and his clever understudy, Harry Gilmer, in their lineup the 'Skins threw only 22 passes, just enough to make their running game more effective. The other 60 plays were divided into 45 tries at the line, between the tackles; 5 punts and 10 end runs.

The 10 around end were the most exciting, and promising part of the Redskins attack. Veterans Eddie Saenz and Dan Sandifer handled most of them, but Gilmer himself tried one and he also sent two rookies with blinding speed, out on the flanks for yardage.

Still untried on end runs this year are veterans Steve Bagarus and Howard Hartley and the money player from Southern California, Jack Kirby.

Ann Gray Wins, Bogley Loses in U. S. Tennis

Hippenstiel Beaten In Grueling Match; Miss Decker Bows

By Jules Loh

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 29.—Four of six Washington area players bowed out of the National amateur tennis championships which started at the West Side Tennis Club here today.

Hal Burrows, Virginia University star, and Mrs. Ann Gray, District women's champ, are the sole survivors of today's first round. Burrows turned in a straight set, 6—3, 6—2, 6—3, win over former Czech Davis Cupper, Ladislav Hecht; and Mrs. Gray registered a decisive 6—1, 6—1, thumping of Kathrine Hubbell of Conway, N. H.

Most prominent among the Washingtonians who met defeat was two-time National junior champ, Gil Bogley. Bogley dropped his opening day match to Bob Abdesselam, of France, seventh seeded foreigner, 6—3, 6—0, 7—5.

Middle Atlantic Champion Maj. Robin Hippenstiel was ousted by Michigan University's Andy Patton in a gruelling two-hour affair, 6—8, 6—2, 3—6, 6—2, 6—3.

Lefty Charley Oliver, Air Force titlist who had the misfortune of drawing top-ranked Ted Schroeder in the first round, managed to take nine games from the Davis Cup star before falling, 6—3, 6—4, 6—2. The match was played on the feature stadium court.

Washington's second-ranking woman player, Charlotte Decker, had to contend with an unfamiliar grass surface, intermittent rains, strong winds, and the Nation's eighteenth ranked player, Nancy Morrison. Miss Decker lost, 6—4, 7—5.

Moylan Upsets Flam; Schroeder, Talbert Gain Second Round

By Gayle Talbot

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Eddie Moylan of Trenton, N. J., enlivened a windy first day of the National Tennis Championships at Forest Hills today by erasing young Herbie Flem of Beverly Hills, Calif., the eighth seeded American player and semifinalist in last year's title event.

Stroking with extreme accuracy from the baseline, which he seldom deserted, Moylan knocked out the former junior champion in straight sets, 6—4, 6—4, 6—3, to supply the day's only real upset in either the men's of women's division.

Jim Brink, rangy Seattle left-hander, took another chunk out of the seeded group by defeating blond Victor Seixas of Philadelphia, 3—6, 0—6, 6—3, 7—5, 6—4.

Billy Talbert of New York, third seeded, dropped an opening set before he defeated Fred Kovaleski of Detroit, 7—9, 6—4, 6—3, 6—2. So did Frank Sedgman, the Australian Davis Cupper, before he turned back Charles Harris of Corpus Christi, Tex., 5—7, 6—4, 6—3, 6—2.

Ted Schroeder, the tournament's No. 1 man, teed off with a 6—3, 6—4, 6—2 victory over Lieut. Charles Oliver of the Army Force.

The match ended so late it was necessary to postpone Champion Pancho Gonzales' debut in the stadium until tomorrow.

Mrs. Dupont Advances

The better women players, led by defending Champion Mrs. Margaret Osborne Dupont of Wilmington, Del., all passed their entrance exams without straining a muscle. Mrs. Dupont looked fully adequate in beating Nina Irwin of New York, 6—1, 6—0.

Body Works Loses, 3-2, To Brewers

The Heurich Brewers, winners of The Washington Post Industrial League, staged a dramatic climax to defeat the Northeast Body Works, 3-2, yesterday on the Ellipse in the city series for the unlimited baseball championship of Washington.

After Pitcher Johnny Clements had booted two bunts to pave the way for two Northeast runs in the first of the ninth, the Brewers scored all of their runs in their half of the ninth after two men were out and nobody on base.

Willie Kaufmann walked after working the count to 3-2. Pepco Barry singled him to third and then Barry stole second. Pinch-hitter Jim Castiglia drove a long fly to right field that fell for a triple when Outfielders Sonny Settle and Danny Hite collided. Both runners scored on the play.

After Charley Aquilina and Ralph Cooper walked, Shortstop Jerry Zanelotti singled in Castiglia with the winning run.

The teams clash again today in the championship game of the double elimination tournament at 4:30 on the South Ellipse.

Old Dominion Host Sunday To Middle States Regatta

By Happy Walker

OLD DOMINION Boat Club Committees are polishing up the welcome mat this week preparing to host the Middle States Championship Regatta this Sunday, September, 4th, down Alexandria way.

Walker

Some 17 clubs from the Eastern States have entered crews ranging rom National Single Sculll Champion Joe Angyal, New York A. C., to Fairmont Boat Club's national champion four-oar and double blade quad crews. This year is the fifty-eighth annual Middle States gathering, according to Regatta Chairman Jack Franklin, who advises 89 entries are already on file.

Old Dominion, winner in the last two years' contests, is priming to make it three in a row. Following Sunday's full day schedule starting at 10 a. m., the visiting bladesmen will compete in the President's Cup Rowing Regatta, Labor Day, on the Georgetown Channel course.

BILL HAVENS, Andy Thomas, Dick Handler, Walt Seelig, Jack Schmid and Chuck Barndt were among the Dempsey Canoe Club paddlers who stopped off, homeward bound, from Sugar Island to take in the Eastern Canoe championships at Lake Hopatcong, N. J., over the weekend.

Collectively, the lads walked off with a first and second in the four-man single blade intermediate, a second in the tandem single-blade and a third in the four-man double-blade event.

THE SOUTHEASTERN Division Championships (outboards) will be held at Greenville, S. C., Sunday, September 4. This will take in the Washington area outboarders, many of whom will head South for the events. Drivers can qualify for the national championships at this race. Most of our flying pancake drivers will pass up Columbia, S. C., the next day to take in the Urbanna Boosters Club annual running.

TRADITIONALLY a Labor Day week-end water sports carnival, the Urbanna Boosters Club, down in Virginia's northern neck, will play host to a large field of inboard racing celebrities on Sunday, September 4. Monday will feature a full schedule of outboard hydroplane heats as well as C family runabouts, 16-h.p. and under and 50-h. p. and under.

Race Chairman Walter Hurley particularly asks that we extend an invitation to the Washington boating fraternity to take part in the regatta. The Chesapeake Skiers will add color to the program both days.

A NICE note from R. Stanley Dollar, widely known owner of the illfated Skip-a-Long, arrived yesterday. Dollar advises that a line has been made fast to the Harmsworth Trophy conqueror, 450 feet below the surface of Lake Tahoe, but that it is impossible to make the craft ready for the President's Cup Regatta power races. He expressed thanks for the many messages received from Washington friends.

JERRY POWELL, popular Skedoodle and Skedaddle owner and driver around the area racing circuit, has a cablegram inviting him to sail on the steamship Atlantic today to participate in three races in Italy in September. Trieste, Italy, is to be the scene.

Powell declined the invite saying, "It's the chance of a lifetime, but I have to stay home and protect my Gordon Munce trophy high-point standing. I'm in the lead now, you know."

Three Swim Records Fall

Bettie Roland of Takoma set a 100-yard breaststroke record and also won the 100-yard freestyle title at last night's District of Columbia AAU senior swimming championships at Takoma pool.

Bettie's record time was 1:22.7. Milton Eaton of Ambassador set a new 220-yard breaststroke record when he swam the distance in 3:08.5. Takoma's 200-yard freestyle relay team set a new record of 2:05.6.

Cooper Upsets Ortiz in 10

chance to finish off his young antagonist with one punch.

That chance came often, and Ortiz took full advantage of it, but Cooper simply refused to stay down, as Ortiz cannonaded him from head to midsection with every blow at his command.

Cooper reached his peak late in the fifth round when he sent a gingery right to Ortiz' chin, sending the El Centro, Calif., veteran down to the canvas with a thump. Ortiz, dazed, but smiling, got up at the count of one, but Referee Reynolds tolled the automatic count of eight as the crowd pleaded with Jimmy to end it with a knockout.

He tried, but couldn't.

As long as he stayed away and peppered Ortiz' battered face with hooks and stiff crosses, Cooper was complete boss. But when he came in and tried to change blows inside with Ortiz, young Jimmy was out of his class.

Ortiz won two of the last three rounds and in both it appeared he would flatten his young opponent. In the ninth he backed Cooper against the ropes and hit him with everything but the bell, but Cooper didn't fold. Instead, he came up with a short uppercut which almost upended Ortiz. In the eighth it was the same story, Ortiz flaying away and Cooper, after absorbing it, returning stronger.

The crowd contributed to a gross gate of $10,325, which, after taxes, left Promoter Florence Turner $7818 to pay off contestants and promotional expenses.

Ortiz weighed 129, the second heaviest he's ever been. He scaled 130 for a Los Angeles fight last year.

Two first-round knockouts featured the action-packed preliminaries. Marshall Clayton, 138, Washington, stopped Billy Cofield, 141, of Baltimore, in 2:48 of the first. Pat Thomas, 130, of Washington, knocked out Ray Hutchins, 132, also of Washington, in 1:33 of the opening round.

Other preliminary results: Leon Daughtry, 145, Washington, decisioned Billy Stoner, 141, Washington, in a four; Jim O'Brien, 154, Baltimore, and Emmett Harris, 155, Washington, fought to a four-round draw; and Little Dynamite, 126, Washington, won a five-round decision from Max Osario, 121, New York.

Ken Heintzelman, star Phillie southpaw, won his first big league start hurling six-hitter for Pittsburgh in 1937.

Strasbourg Assembly Maps Plans

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—The European Assembly today prepared plans to set itself up as a permanent parliament for Western Europe.

The assembly's political committee voted these increased powers for the representatives:

1. Semiannual meetings instead of sessions once a year.

2. A staff of permanent officials responsible to the assembly.

3. Wider power to discuss and recommend solutions for Europe's problems.

The assembly also began drawing up a code of human rights for the people of Western Europe, and the legal committee approved 4 of 11 fundamental freedoms proposed by Henri Teitgen of France: right to safety of person; to immunity from arbitrary arrest; to exemption from slavery; to immunity from arbitrary interference in private life.

The sweeping changes proposed by the political committee must be approved by the foreign ministers, who now form the executive body of the council.

The assembly also began drawing up a code of human rights for the people of Western Europe. The assembly's legal committee overwhelmingly approved the first four of eleven fundamental freedoms proposed by Henri Teitgen of France.

The right of safety of person, including the right to life, liberty and immunity from torture or cruel treatment.

The right to immunity from arbitrary arrest, detention, exile or any other arbitrary measure; the right to be presumed innocent in a trial, and the right of protection against conviction for offenses which were not illegal at the time they were committed.

AFGE Seeks Promotion Change for Guards

Revised standards of promotion of Government building guards were sought yesterday from Harry B. Mitchell, Civil Service Commission chairman, by an American Federation of Government Employes delegation.

Making the request were John B. Murray, national vice president and organizer of AFGE; Capt. E. F. O'Hare, president, and Capt. LeRoy Westbury, legislative chairman of the United States Special Police and Building Guards Lodge No. 647, AFGE.

The delegation asked the commission chairman for a standards revision which would base promotions on the degree of responsibility rather than on the number of personnel supervised, as at present.

Americans Safe in Burma Trap

Rangoon, Burma, Aug. 29 (AP).—Eighteen Americans trapped by civil war in Taunggyi are reported safe, but efforts to remove them were complicated today by rebel capture of another Burma state capital.

The army acknowledged that anti-government forces have taken Lashion, capital of the northern Shan state, and one-time railroad starting point of the old Burma Road to China.

A diplomatic mission from Rangoon, including Robert L. Clifford and Ballard R. Donnell, American consulate officers, had hoped to take foreign nationals from rebel-held Taunggyi and fly them out of the war zone from Lashio Airfield. The government today grounded all army and civilian planes scheduled to go there.

Lashio is 130 miles northeast of Mandalay, and 160 miles north of Taunggyi, the southern Shan state capital which was captured by Karen tribesmen August 13. The diplomtic mission apparently had hoped to take foreigners overland from Taunggyi to Lashio for removal by plane.

Model Plane Honors Won by State Aide's Son

Roger L. Barron, 14, model airplane enthusiast of Springfield, Va., was runner up for top honors at the International Model Airplane meet at Detroit, his father, Bryton Barron learned yesterday.

Young Barron won three seconds and one third prize at the meet which opened last Tuesday and ended yesterday.

Mosquitoes Chase Boars Into Austria

Vienna, Austria, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—The ministry of agriculture announced tonight that border areas were afflicted with an invasion of wild boars which fled from Czechoslovakia to escape mosquities.

The ministry reported guard towers had been set up so game wardens could drive the boars back and end serious damage to Austrian fields and orchards.

Hurricane Backlash Forces Airliner Down

Youngstown, Ohio, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—A Northwest Airlines plane with 46 passengers from New York to Seattle, made an emergency landing here today after being caught in the backlash of the Southern hurricane.

Passengers were shaken up and most became air sick. Three were hospitalized here.

Ex-Convict Held in $1100 As Assailant Of Gambler

Shooting Suspect Previously Accused Of Knifing Man in 'Misunderstanding'

A Washington ex-convict was arrested by Prince Georges County police yesterday in connection with the shooting of an indicted gambler last Friday in Bladensburg.

George Paul Harding, 38, of 437 Massachusetts ave. nw., surrendered himself to county authorities and was charged with discharging firearms without a permit and assault with a dangerous weapon. He was freed under $1100 bond for a preliminary hearing in Hyattsville Police Court, September 19.

GEORGE P. HARDING

Howard's police record dates from 1927, and includes jail sentences of three to six years for manslaughter and one year for assault.

Just before Del-Negro was shot at 3:30 Friday morning, Samuel Ochs, a Georgetown clothing merchant, was knifed. Ochs identified Harding as his assailant to police. Later he declined to prosecute and described the incident as "just a friendly little misunderstanding." No mention of the knifing was made in the arrest warrant served on Harding yesterday.

Prince Georges County Detective Earl Huber, who is investigating the shooting, the knifing, and a 30-hour delay by police in reporting the case, said he met Harding yesterday at an "appointed place," and took him to Hyattsville. Harding listed his occupation as "clerk" on the police blotter.

Policeman James Burgess of the county force, son of the Crossroads liquor licensee, reported the shooting shortly after it happened, but Prince Georges County police did not launch an investigation until 36 hours later.

Del-Negro told Burgess the shots came from the bushes outside the restaurant and that he could not identify his assailant. Burgess said yesterday that of all those present when Ochs was knifed, only Harding was not present when Del-Negro was shot. Ochs was treated and released from Sibley Hospital Friday.

Harding's bond was set by Justice of the Peace Mary Fainter.

Later in the day, Justice of the Peace Harold Manning in Hyattsville set $300 bond for Del-Negro as a State witness at Harding's preliminary hearing.

Man Held for Jury On Larceny Charge

Charles Reese Ward, 54, of 1935 Park rd. was held for Grand Jury action yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court on a charge of attempted larceny by trick. He was released under $2500 bail.

Ward was arrested July 27 on complaint of Mrs. Cora Baxter, 4207 Monroe st., Colmar Manor, Md., who said he was trying to talk her into investing $9000 in North Carolina oil leases.

Battle of the Drivers

No One Understands Women—Driving a Car (or Otherwise)

California Expert Says Her Apparent Idiocy an Illusion

District's Mrs. Kirwan Agrees With Dictum—"Men Better Drivers"

(Continuing, a report on women drivers written by Bob Johnson and Muriel Barnett of the Los Angeles Mirror. Based on observations of Edwin D. Fletcher, California bachelor and State driving examiner.)

(Today's study of the male motorist is by Mrs. Elinor D. Kirwan, secretary of the Commissioners Traffic Advisory Council.)

Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

Today's guest expert will probably be stripped of her sorority pin as a traitor to her sex.

Honest, Mrs. Elinor D. Kirwan believes that men are better drivers than women in many ways.

As administrative assistant to Traffic Director George E. Keneipp and secretary of the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council, Mrs. Kirwan has more than a passing knowledge of motorists and their failings.

But this is the ladies' corner, so come, Mrs. Kirwan, men (bless 'em) must have some faults as drivers.

Pinned down, Mrs. Kirwan says, yes, they——

Are inclined to speed more.

Usually take more chances because they are self-confident.

Are more irritable with the shortcomings of other drivers.

("Patience isn't one of their many virtues," admits Mrs. K.)

Don't appear to have the same regard for rules and regulations that women have.

"Incidentally," says Mrs. Kirwan, rallying to defense of her sex, "the men who rap women drivers who ogle clothes in shop windows aren't adverse to hanging out the car window and whistling at the first well-put-together chassis they see."

Along the same line, Mrs. Kirwan recalls the line of Inspector Arthur E. Miller of the Traffic Division that he had never seen a "one-arm" woman driver.

"Killed Her, Too"

Some men are convinced women shouldn't drive. Mrs. Kirwan recalls the case of one man who was enraged because his wife drove off in the family car. When she returned home and got out of the car to open the garage doors, he jumped into the driver's seat and drove over her. Killed her, too.

Mrs. Kirwan called Lindsey T. Rider, the District's chief permit examiner, into her office to get his viewpoint on men and women drivers.

Rider exploded the theory that women are the only ones who get nervous when they take their tests for driver's permits. Men, he said, are just as jittery on the tests.

Rider, who's been giving driving tests for 18 years, has found that men are apt to be arrogant don't like to have their driving ability questioned. Women, he says, are usually just the opposite.

Surprisingly enough, almost as many women as men take tests for driver's permits these days.

Rider has made another observation about the male motorist. He may park his car perfectly, then when he pulls out of the parking space he will go through a red light or a stop sign.

Mrs. Kirwan's patience with men drivers may partially be explained because she occasionally goes to jail.

To Give Lessons

But don't get it wrong. Mrs. Kirwan goes to District Jail periodically to give lessons in traffic safety to male inmates there. And some of them are in sore need of instruction, or they wouldn't be there.

Mrs. Kirwan and Rider tell the story of one male applicant for a driver's test. He had flunked his first try and had returned for a second try.

Some one whispered in the ear of the examiner, "Say, you're not going to give a license to that guy are you? He's an inmate at a mental institution.

"Not so," said the applicant with a bland smile. "I merely am employed there."

But a telephone check disclosed him to actually be a mental patient. No, he didn't get the permit.

D. C. Women Tell Off Masculine Drivers

Women have been talking about men drivers since the day Henry Ford disrupted carriage traffic in Detroit and men have been talking about women drivers for almost as long. The Los Angeles Mirror summed up the case against women drivers in a recent series which The Washington Post felt its readers should see. However, three noted Washington women have been given the opportunity to speak for their sex. The series continues today.

Afoot it may be different, but men drivers often make passes at girl drivers who wear glasses.

The passes, however, are called sideswipes and are sometimes fatal.

The weakness of women drivers for fancy spectacles, our expert says, is one reason why men swear at them.

The expert is Edwin D. Fletcher, senior examiner of the California State Department of Motor Vehicles.

It is his scientific opinion that the main thing wrong with women drivers is that nobody understands them—least of all themselves.

Women drive as they do for reasons that are sound if not always obvious, Fletcher believes. What appears to be idiocy in madame's handling of her car often is an illusion. She may simply be dressed wrong.

Women who would not think of going to a man's apartment alone, feeding lions by hand or washing the baby in naptha while smoking, still drive cars in sun glasses chosen mainly for their appearance.

"The wide side-arms on some smoked glasses," Fletcher points out, "cut down the normal range of vision as much as one-third on each side."

Outdoors Only

Fletcher also advises against wearing dark glasses indoors—makes the eyes more sensitive than ever to glare when you go outdoors. Also, stay away from dime-store glasses, he says. Cheap smoked glasses on an auto driver often result in expensive funerals.

Fletcher's 13 years in California's Department of Motor Vehicles have provided him with a fat dossier on Vanity Jane. She is a creature of extremes.

Either she wears a modish hat which blocks off part of her vision or else she goes streaking along hatless with her tresses floating in the breeze.

There is nothing Fletcher admires, privately, like a tress in the breeze. But in a car loose hair can be murder or suicide.

"Put it in a net or tie a scarf around it when you drive," he advises. "A sudden gust of wind can whip it across your eyes before you know it."

Another of the flaws in Jane's character is her inability to grasp the fact that a rear-view mirror is for looking behind you to see if anything is coming.

Instead of the highway at the rear, the mirror in Jane's car more often reflects a spot on the floor or a burn in the upholstery.

"Don't twist the vision mirror out of line to put on lipstick and then forget to reset it," Fletcher says. "Get a vanity mirror installed on the sun visor. Then use it only when the car is standing still."

Cheat On Tests

Another little-known source of road accidents is the fact that many women, no matter how honest otherwise, cheat when taking their driver's test. They are expert at memorizing the eye chart while waiting innocently in line for application blanks at the license bureau.

Be honest with yourself when you take your eye tests, Fletcher advises. You are only cheating yourself and the owner of the next flower bed you mistake for a driveway.

Being honest with the eye chart is a good beauty aid, Fletcher says. Poor eyes are under constant strain in driving.

"Forcing eyes, that should have glasses, to do their work without them," Fletcher observes, "causes reddened eyes, dark shadows, crow's feet and squint—not to mention sleepiness at the wheel."

(Tomorrow: Fletcher's opinions on women shoppers.)

Opening Fete For Freeway Set Oct. 1

Ceremony to Mark Inauguration of Traffic-Speeding Elevated Highway

A grand opening for the $3,200,000 Whitehurst Freeway was planned yesterday for October 1 by city and civic officials of Washington and Arlington County, Va.

The ceremony will begin at 2 p. m. at a speaker's stand erected at Rock Creek Parkway and K st. nw., eastern terminus of the mile long structure. Acting Engineer Commissioner L. E. Cox will be the principal speaker.

Other speakers who will be introduced by Charles M. Upham, engineer-director, American Roadbuilders Association, master of ceremonies, include:

Director of Highways J. N. Robertson; Traffic Director George E. Keneipp; P. Y. K. Howatt, chairman, Motor Vehicle Parking Agency, and George Graham, chairman, Board of Trade highway committee.

Mrs. H. C. Whitehurst, widow of H. C. Whitehurst, former highways chief, for whom the structure is named, will cut a ribbon across the roadway. A motorcade will drive over the freeway from the east to the west end, then across Key bridge to Rosslyn Plaza.

The group will be greeted there by officials of Arlington County and the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce, who will speak from a stand erected on the circle.

Plans for a souvenir program are being made by Robert R. Hershman, president McArthur Boulevard Citizens Association; Edwin L. Stohlman, president, Georgetown Businessmen's Association, will be in charge of parade floats. Mrs. Henry W. Draper of the Progressive Citizens Association will supervise participation by juvenile groups in the celebration.

On the Virginia side, Paul A. Hill of the Arlington Chamber of Commerce will handle the program plans.

The Metropolitan Police Band will provide music.

Participating in the planning yesterday were the Washington Board of Trade, American Automobile Association, Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown, Georgetown Businessmen's Association, Georgetown Citizens Association, Georgetown Lions Club, MacArthur Boulevard Citizens Association and the Arlington Chamber of Commerce.

The structure was begun July 7, 1947, but was delayed by a shortage of steel, then strikes by carpenters, laborers and concrete mixmen.

H. G. Shirley Highway May Open Sept. 6

Opening of the new Henry G. Shirley Memorial highway in Fairfax County to passenger car and bus traffic has been set tentatively for September 6, the Virginia State Highway Department announced yesterday.

The date is dependent on next week's weather, since some work remains before the southbound lane can be opened its entire length. Some sections of the new highway already are in use.

The southbound lane only will be used on a stretch extending 7 miles north from the new highway's junction with Route 1 at Woodbridge, the highway department announced. The northbound lane along that section has not been built.

The new highway, 17.3 miles in length, extends to Woodbridge from the Pentagon rd. network, and is expected to carry about 80 per cent of the traffic now using Route 1 between those points. The new route will be 3.4 miles shorter, and will by-pass Alexandria.

The new highway will be a limited-access, four-lane boulevard. It was designed for speeds up to 70 miles an hour, but the highway department pointed out the legal speed limit for such roads is 55.

Because of the road's military value, the Federal Government bore most of the cost. When complete, the project will represent an expenditure of about $6,500,000, of which $4,500,000 has been spent.

The road was named after the late Henry G. Shirley, Virginia highway commissioner for 19 years before his death in 1941.

Police Identify Body Of Drowned Man

Harbor police yesterday identified the body of a man found floating in the Washington channel near the sea wall Sunday, but are still looking for his relatives.

The man is Harrison Roosevelt Henson, 39, who was identified from his finger prints by the FBI. Police said he had been in the water for around 12 hours, and that there was no sign of violence. FBI records failed to show Henson's home address.

Cafe Owner Admits Credit Liquor Sales

The Occidental Restaurant and Hotel, Inc., of 1411 Pennsylvania ave. nw., yesterday pleaded guilty to three counts of selling alcoholic beverages on credit.

Joseph McGarraghy, attorney for the Occidental, told the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board that the practice started by extension of credit to hotel residents.

The ABC board took the case under advisement.

District's Annual Fire Loss Reduced 51 Per Cent in Year

District fire losses in the fiscal year of 1949 dropped by 51 per cent from 1948, bringing the figures down to the level of the previous five years.

The Fire Department informed the Commissioners yesterday that the estimated fire loss for 1949 was $1,028,050, a total of $1,052,675 under the 1948 total. The average loss amounted to $210 per fire and $1.14 per capita.

This figure is considered "very low" by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, the report noted.

Fire Marshal R. C. Roberts pointed out that "figures for any one year do not show a real trend. You need five years for that since any one fire can upset your statistical record."

The figures for the past five years are: 1945, $1,080,000; 1946, $1,983,000; 1947, $1,349,000 and 1948, $2,080,000. The 1948 figure was unusually high because of several large fires including ones at Kann's warehouse, Walter Reed Hospital and the Navy Yard.

During the fiscal year, the number of alarms, false alarms and actual fires decreased. A total of 4891 fires were reported, 8768 alarms were turned in, of which 1157 were false.

Thirty-five retirements, including the involuntary one of Fire Chief Clement Murphy, and 26 resignations took place in the department.

Two new 100-foot aerial ladder trucks and three new pumper engines were placed in service, retiring all apparatus with two-wheel brakes.

Shootin' Iron of 1844 Vintage Stops Ornery Radio Varmint

Wal, I'll tell yuh, podner, this Sid Wohl mebbe don't do much bronc bustin' an' mebbe he ain't never et off a chuck wagon on th' range, busy as he is with his radio shop at 829 3r st. nw:, but even so he's a mighty fast hombre with a shootin' iron.

Reckon it was about 3:30 p. m. yestidy an' things wuz right quiet along the street—nary a cattle rustler nor injun in sight. Wohl wuz in the rear of his store tunin' up one of his wireless contraptions.

Suddenly—a footstep!

Wohl took a quick look-see through a hole in the partition separatin' the workshop from the rest of th' store.

There, big as a range cow, he saw some ornery varmint a-stuffin' a wireless machine under his coat.

Wohl's lips tightened into a slit. His eyes grew cold an' hard an' his trigger finger twitched like a cow's tail in fly-time.

From one of these 'ere filing cabinets he hauled his trusty 1844 model hoss pistol.

"Reach! Or I'll pump yer full o' lead!" he barked grimly, tellin' reporters later that he recollected such talk in "Badmen's Territory" or "Streets of Laredo" or some sech places.

The bad man threw up his hands, and a jar containin' sales tax money belongin' to Trigger Wohl dropped from under the critter's coat. Seems like he'd replaced the radio with th' money as Wohl come up on him.

Wohl locked the ornery jasper in the store. Then he lit out to a neighbor, Samuel Dick, New Jersey Cleaners, 831 3rd st. nw., who called the law.

A posse gallupped up in a scout car a few minutes later an' picked up the outlaw who was peering sadly out through the barred door of the store.

Wohl, a peace lovin' citizen, 'ceptin' when he's crossed by bandits or mean hombres, said the hoss pistol was a little gift from an old customer.

PUC Hearing On Gas Rate Rise Allowed

Judge Edward M. Curran of District Court yesterday refused to prevent the Public Utilities Commission from holding hearings today on the proposed $900,000 "emergency" rate increase desired by the Washington Gas Light Co.

The injunction against the hearings was sought by George C. Webster, trustee of the Gas Consumers and Independent Appliance Dealers Association.

The jurist ruled against the injunction without prejudice against any later attempt by the association from acting to prevent a rate increase, should the PUC grant one.

In their action, the appliance men charge that the PUC as constituted for the gas hearing is illegal. It is also charged that there is no emergency, and that the increase is not warranted.

The dealers also say they need more time to analyze pertinent data in the hearings and that this time has been denied them.

The gas company said that it needs the increase at this time in order to keep up its investment credit position and that a decline in earnings in prospect for this year may jeopardize this position.

Father Pulls Flaming Shirt From Boy, 9

A nine-year-old Arlington boy, whose T-shirt caught fire as he played with matches in the family garage was saved from more severe injury yesterday when his father pulled the flaming shirt barehanded from the boy's back.

Straub

The boy, Thomas Straub, 4835 Columbia Pike, was in satisfactory condition at Arlington Hospital last night, with first and second degree burns of the neck, right arm and shoulder, and both hands.

His father, Walter Straub, proprietor of the Barcroft Market, 4835 Columbia Pike, was treated for burns on both hands.

Straub said about 12:30 p. m. his son rushed screaming into the store, his shirt in flames, to the horror of about a dozen relatives and customers.

Straub believed the boy may have got lighter fluid or paint on the shirt, causing it to ignite.

175 Strike At Gravel Firm for Pay Boost

Equipment Idle; Some Slowdown Anticipated in Construction Here

Dredges, tugs, barges and other equipment of the Smoot Sand and Gravel Corp. were idle yesterday as 175 union employes went on strike over a wage dispute and picketed the company's two plants here.

The walkout was expected to slow down major construction projects somewhat, as the Smoot company is the largest single supplier of sand and gravel for concrete in the area.

However, spokesmen for the construction industry said at least four contractors made arrangements yesterday to obtain the materials from smaller suppliers in Maryland and Virginia.

80 Per Cent Supply

One contractor's spokesman estimated that the outside firms could supply about 80 per cent of the sand and gravel supplies needed on current work, though it might take a few days to start the flow of supplies.

Deputy Director of Highways Samuel R. Harris declared the strike would have "very little effect" on District public works because of arrangements for outside supplies.

Major projects which may be somewhat slowed, according to contractors, are the K st. overpass project, the Government Accounting Office construction, Dupont Circle underpass work, 14th st. bridge and South Capitol st. bridge.

In the Smoot Sand and Gravel strike, the employes, including dredge, tug and barge crews and mechanics who are members of Local 77, AFL Operating Engineers, and truck drivers, warehouse men and helpers affiliated with Local 639, AFL Teamster' Union, are asking for a 25 cents an hour raise.

Pickets from the two unions yesterday patrolled the street in front of the main plant at 30th and K sts. nw. and the Smoot repair shops on First st., south of Potomac ave. se. Most of the company's river equipment was tied up on the Alexandria waterfront, while some was at the company's District wharves.

The strike is the fifth this summer affecting the construction industry, which has also had eight other labor disputes in which walkouts were averted.

Plasterers Still Out

The fourth strike, that of the Plasterers' Union, in which 500 AFL plasterers walked out over a rejected demand for a 2 per cent health and hospitalization fund, continued in its eleventh day yesterday. The Employing Plasterers Association met yesterday and members affirmed their opposition to the fund proposal.

In another dispute, involving 32 technicians employed by Radio Station WTOP who are asking raises and longer vacations, Federal Conciliator Gilbert S. McCutcheon is attempting to get the two parties together for negotiations before Wednesday night.

The technicians, represented by Local 1215, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, have served notice of contract termination. The notice becomes effective at midnight Wednesday and they are free to strike then.

Man's Death on Blazing Couch Ruled Accidental

A certificate of accidental death was issued yesterday by Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, acting coroner, for Carl L. Euren, 55, retired government employe, who was found dead on a blazing couch in the living room of his home, 1900 H st. nw., Friday afternoon.

Dr. Murphy said his investigation showed that Euren died from second and third degree burns to 75 per cent of his body.

Boosts Allowed In Rents Below Figures Sought

Rent increases approved by the District Rent Control Administration during the first half of 1949 averaged 11.40 per cent compared with the 17.68 per cent hike asked for, a report to the Senate District Committee showed yesterday.

From the time the local rent office was first set up, January 1, 1942, through last June 30 a total of 88,619 petitions on rent were handled of which 85,470 were submitted by landlords. The peak year was 1948 with 30,599. The first half of 1949 brought 8918 petitions affecting 11,111 units.

Rent control officials estimated that they had "saved" tenants some $382,275.46 by denying part of the requested increases.

Police to Auction 47 Autos, 1 Boat On September 12

Unclaimed and abandoned property including 47 autos and one row boat will be put up for auction by the Metropolitan Police Department on September 12 at 10 a. m., Inspector Robert C. Pearce, chief property clerk, announced yesterday.

The sale will take place at the police storeyard, 6th and School sts. sw., with the auction objects open for inspection one hour before bidding time.

The latest car in the group is a 1941 Ford. Other items include a 1929 Nash, a 1929 Marquette and a 12-foot dory.

Fairfax Bond Issue Up for Vote Today

Residents of Fairfax County's Sanitary District No. 1 will vote today on a proposed three-million-dollar bond issue to provide an extensive sewerage program for the district.

An eleventh-hour threat to the sewerage program was dissolved yesterday when the General Services Administration announced it could take no action on a request by the City of Falls Church to refuse to sell Holmes Run trunk sewer to the county. The trunk line is a key installation in the proposed sewerage network.

The Federal agency's decision was outlined in identical letters sent to James J. Corbalis, jr., Fairfax County sanitary engineer, and Larue Van Meter, Falls Church city attorney. It informed the litigants it "was unable to comply with the resolution," approved by the Falls Church City Council last week.

Obligated to Sell

The letter, signed by Henry J. Sullivan of the GSA's bureau of community facilities, said the agency was "legally obligated" to dispose of the sewer to the county's board of supervisors "under a proper contract of sale." The sewer was part of a vast program of war-built emergency facilities, constructed with the understanding that they would be available to local communities at the expiration of the emergency.

Falls Church had protested the sale by contending that the county plans to increase sewer charges to the city once it acquires title to the Federally-built facility. Most of the city is served by sewer lines which will become the property of Fairfax County if the sale materializes.

Provided the program is approved in today's referendum, the two-million-dollar Holmes Run sewer will be purchased by the county at a cost of $500,000. Other features of the proposed program include construction of a sewer treatment plant, $1,105,000; construction of about 44 miles of subtrunk and connecting sewers, $1,138,000; purchase of sewerage systems built by private developers in the county, $117,000, and interest payments totaling about $140,000.

Special Tax Proposed

To finance the program, the county proposes to levy a special tax of 20 cents on the $100 valuation within the sanitary district, and to impose an annual charge for services rendered by the new system.

About 1000 voters are expected to participate in the referendum, open only to persons living within the sanitary district. Polls in eight precincts will be open from 6:30 a. m. to 7:30 p. m.

The sewerage program last night drew indorsement from H. A. Ward, a past president of the Fairfax County Federation of Citizens Associations and one of the leaders in a fight to block annexation of part of Fairfax County by Falls Church.

Developments of the program, Ward said, would greatly enhance property values in the district and also would pave the way for faster development of the county's urban areas.

Toxoid Gives Diphtheria Immunity

(This is the second of a series of six articles prepared by Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer of the District of Columbia, on the immunization of children against disease as school days approach once again.)

By Dr. George C. Ruhland

The importance of immunization of children against the common diseases of childhood cannot be too strongly emphasized. Since the first of the current year, five deaths have occurred as a result of diphtheria. There have been 25 cases reported in this same period.

A study of these deaths by the Health Department showed that the five who died were not immunized against diphtheria. It is felt that these unfortunate deaths could have been prevented if immunization measures had been performed.

What Is the Nature of Immunization Against Diphtheria?

A series of injections of toxoid provides a rapid, effective method of preventing diphtheria. It confers active immunity upon the child. By active immunity, we mean a long-term resistance which is built up gradually over a period of weeks, while the injections are taking effect. Unless the series of injections for this disease is completed, your child is not fully protected. To maintain this resistance, children should receive booster doses from time to time.

When Should Immunization Be Given?

Every child should be immunized against diphtheria in infancy, and at least again just prior to entrance into school.

Children who are to enter school in September will be given a physical examination. It is strongly recommended that the booster injection be given at this time. If the child has not previously been completely immunized at this time, the series of diphtheria injections should be given, not merely a booster dose.

What Results Are Accomplished by Immunization?

Protection against diphtheria results from immunization.

Who Should Give This Immunization?

Your physician in his office or at your home, or in one of the Health Department's clinics.

Immunization clinics at Polk Health Center, 7th and P sts., nw. will be open at 3 p. m. every Tuesday.

The Southwest Health Center Immunization Clinic will be open every Wednesday at 3 p. m.

Infants and preschool children who are not under the care of a private physician should register for health supervision, which includes immunizations in the Health Department's child welfare clinics.

Further information may be obtained by calling National 6000, Extension 641.

Jett, Pioneer Corrections Aide, Retiring

C. B. Jett, 63, who will retire Wednesday after 39 years of service with the Department of Corrections, believes convicts are no different from the average free citizen "if treated like humans."

C. B. Jett

As supervisor of construction for the department, Jett has seen the project at Occoquan, Va., grow from a group of frame buildings on 1154 acres with 25 inmates to 74 modern brick and cement buildings, including the Reformatory, occupying 4950 acres. The Workhouse and the Reformatory now have 2524 inmates.

The official pioneered the workhouse project, supervising construction of the first building in 1910.

"Inmates lived in tents while the work was going on," Jett reminisced.

The Workhouse was the first penal institution in the United States free from cells, bars or walls, Jett said. "People came from all over the world to inspect it," he asserted. Then as now, only those convicted of minor offenses were sent there.

The idea of relative freedom for prison inmates was developed by a commission appointed by the then President Theodore Roosevelt in 1908 to study prison conditions here, Jett said.

The official, the oldest employe in point of service at both the Lorton Reformatory and Occoquan Workhouse, live near the Reformatory with his wife. A son, Wallace, is a GI student at the University of Maryland. Jett, a native of Spottsylvania Courthouse, Va., came to the District in 1908.

Falls Church Water Cut by Power Lapse

A Sunday night power failure kept Falls Church's two water pumps operating only intermittently until late yesterday. The failure brought the water level in the city's tank down to an all-time morning low of 10 inches. The usual 10 a. m. average is 8 feet, according to City Manager Roy F. Dunn.

Dunn said the acute shortage in the city's sketchy water supply was augmented by many residents who jumped the gun on the city's water system expansion, now nearing completion.

The city's two water pumps went off Sunday night at the height of the windstorm that swept the area, Dunn said, and despite efforts of city workers, it was not until late yesterday that the two resumed normal operations.

Dunn said, contrary to the belief of many Falls Church residents, the city's new million dollar water system, scheduled to increase the water supply some 15 times, is not yet in operation.

The line has been connected but only for test purposes, he said. Many residents, he said, stepped up their water usage after publicity about the connection.

Dunn said the city's ban on use of water for other than essential purposes is still in effect and warned that the city police department will continue to watch for offenders.

Indictments Accuse Six in Murder Cases

Two persons were charged with first-degree murder and four others with second-degree murder in indictments returned yesterday by the District grand jury.

Women or whisky or both were factors in five of the slayings. The sixth was the result of an argument between landlord and tenant.

First-degree murder defendant Fred S. Pritchett, 38, of 212 Channing st. ne., was charged with fatally shooting Clyde L. King, 50, while the latter was riding as engineer of a train in the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad yards here.

According to police, Pritchett earlier had taken King's wife to a birthday party and they had been drinking. When they returned to the King home at the Channing street address, police related, King belabored Pritchett with his fists. It was shortly thereafter that King was shot with his own pistol.

Janitor Slain

Also indicted on a first-degree murder count was Ola Mae Whitlock, 34, of 1420 R st. nw. The deceased is Donnie Young, 49, janitor of the R st. address, where she said they lived in a common-law marriage relationship.

Mrs. Whitlock told police she had ordered a visitor named Wyman Walker from the apartment, that he became belligerent and that she aimed her pistol at Walker but hit Young instead. The Whitlock woman had been drinking, according to court papers.

Second-degree murder was charged to Eddie E. Poe, 33, of 1742 8th st. nw. He is charged with beating to death with his fists, Aretha Flowers, 30, his common-law wife. Witnesses said they heard the beating going on intermittently throughout the night of August 6. Mrs. Flowers died the next day.

Charged with second-degree murder in a stabbing was Sylvester W. Kitrell, 25, of 225 D st. nw. His victim was James E. Patterson, 27, of 456 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Stabbed With Icepick

According to court statements, Kitrell accused Patterson of visiting his girl friend. A fight ensued, and Patterson was fatally stabbed with an icepick in his forehead.

Herbert F. Wilkins, 34, of 1028 4th st. ne., was charged with second-degree murder in bludgeoning to death with an iron pipe his father-in-law, William Benezette, 70, of the same address. Wilkins allegedly struck Benezette when the latter tried to stop Wilkins from beating his 23-year-old wife.

Charlie C. Jones, 60, of 942 I st. nw., was charged with hammering to death with a hatchet Joseph B. Quidley, 88, manager of rooms at the I st. address. Jones claimed self-defense, when accused by police of second-degree murder.

Charged with gaming law violations here were persons listed on court papers as:

Abraham Loube, 56, of 1216 Hemlock st. nw.; Rossie L. Barber, 42, of 6211 H st. ne.; Paul O. Hansborough, 27, of 2520 12th pl. se.; James E. Irby, 28, of 2523 13th st. nw.; Booker T. White, 39, of 1909 30th pl. se., and Albert Pittman, jr., 43, of 7 New York ave. nw.

Man Killed In Leap Into Truck's Path

A man identified from fingerprints as Epps Plumer, 35, of 1704 14th st. ne., jumped in front of an ice truck near College Park, Md., yesterday and was killed.

Dr. John T. Maloney, a Prince Georges County medical examiner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Driver of the truck was identified as Alfred W. Fleshman, 33, of 8606 56th ave., Berwyn, Md.

Fleshman told officers Plumer was standing beside the road at Highway 1 and Queens Chapel rd., near College Park, Md., and suddenly jumped in the path of his truck. Two witnesses corroborated the story, police said.

Fleshman was released under $1000 bond for hearing Thursday on a technical charge of manslaughter.

Burglars Use Truck to Move Radios, Tires

Burglars used a truck to haul away $1100 worth of radios and appliances, plus an undertermined number of auto tires over the weekend from the Firestone Store, 13th and K sts. nw., Frank P. Payne, manager, reported to police yesterday.

The thieves left no trace of their manner of entry and Payne said he believes either they had a key or one had secreted himself inside before the place closed Saturday.

Included in the loot were two television sets, 4 radios, a phonograph-radio combination, electric appliances and the tires. The looters also cleaned out a show window, Payne said.

Leisurely weekend safe burglars invaded the Capital Ford Motor Coach Sales, Inc., 691 Maine ave. sw., and took $200 in cash plus a small quantitiy of whisky.

Edwin S. Pardoe, manager, said they used tools from the company's shop to break into the safe. While in the place, he said, they drank a pint of whisky, took two fifths of liquor with them and left one untouched.

Safe burglars were less successful at a variety store at 1504 7th st. nw., Harry Ades, the owner, reported to police. They failed to smash open a safe, but took $18 from a cash register.

Miss Faye Redwine, 504 E st. ne., reported to police that at 1:30 a. m., yesterday, she was awakened by an intruder at her bedroom door. She screamed, she said, and he fled.

Police Pvt. A. F. Mitchell, of the 13th Precinct patrol wagon crew fired one shot at a man who fled when the officer surprised him early yesterday in the act of cutting a screen in a store at 236 Rhode Island ave. nw. The man escaped.

$2192 Produce Theft Reported

Isadore Feldman, manager of I. Feldman & Co., 1255 4th st. ne., told police yesterday that an inventory showed loss of $2192 worth of produce in a theft at the company's plant reported Saturday.

Four locks were broken by the thieves, Feldman said, who obtained 103 cases of eggs, 5 boxes of butter, 5 cases of poultry, and 10 boxes of cheese.

L. L. Beebe, Ex-Engineer For FWA, Dies

Lawrence L. Beebe, 70, formerly a mechanical enginner with the Federal Works Administration's Bureau of Public Roads here, died Sunday morning after about a year's illness.

Mr. Beebe, a resident of Greater Washington for the past 40 years, was born in Alpine, N. Y. He was graduated from Cornell University in the class of 1903.

He worked for the Lehigh Valley Railroad before coming here in 1908 with the Bureau of Standards. He remained with the Bureau of Standards until 1914, when he joined the Bureau of Public Roads.

He served as a captain during World War I in chemical warfare. He resumed work with the Bureau of Public Roads after the war. He retired in December, 1948.

He was a member of Chevy Chase Lodge No. 42, FAAM.

He is survived by two sons, Charles L. of Tucson, Ariz., and John Beebe, 7 Rosemary st., Chevy Chase. Mrs. Beebe died in 1945.

Funeral services will be held 11 a. m. Wednesday at the Arlington Chapel. Burial will follow in the cemetery.

Heart Attack Is Fatal to F. L. Hawes

Francis L. Hawes, 76, retired Federal Trade Commission employe and realtor, died late Sunday of a heart attack at the Pine View Rest Home, Bethesda, Md.

A native of Oakfield, N. Y., Mr. Hawes came to Washington in 1908 as a member of the old Bureau of Corporations, which later became the FTC. He graduated from the National Law School.

After World War I, Mr. Hawes went into the real estate business and at one time was a partner in the Capital View Realty Co. He retired from active business four years ago.

Mr. Hawes is survived by a sister, Mrs. Julia Hawes Northrup of Watkins Glen, N. Y., a daughter, Mrs. Katherine Hawes Gunion, 3403 Macomb st. nw., and one grandson.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 11 a. m., from Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be at Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Woman Denies She Whipped Ex-Husband

Mrs. Rose B. Moore, 766 Princeton pl. nw., denied yesterday that she horsewhipped her former husband when he came to her home August 15 to take away their two sons under a court order.

She issued the denial in an answer to the petition of the husband, John A. Moore, 43, a Mount Airy, Md., farmer, who seeks to have District Court hold the former wife in contempt.

Mrs. Moore, 39-year-old Government worker here, countercharged that Moore is engaging in a falsified and "deliberate program of publicity" designed to defeat her efforts to get support money from him while the sons are with her.

The father has legal custody of the boys after a divorce she obtained, but Mrs. Moore can have them alternate weekends and during the first-half of the summer.

Mrs. Moore asserts the children desire to remain with her and fears the boys, ages 11 and 8, are being treated on their father's farm as "stepchildren." Moore has remarried and has children by his second marriage.

An affidavit signed by the older son, John A. Moore, jr., complains, "When we are with my mother, the days seem to go by real fast and when we are on the farm they seem to go so slow."

John also says that his school lunches generally consist of dry sandwiches and sometimes some fruit, while Moore's children by his present marriage get lettuce and tomato as well, the affidavit says.

Church Board Studies H St. Channel Plan

Trustees of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church will meet this morning to decide what action to take on a proposed traffic channelization project which would cut across land in front of the church.

The board will decide chiefly whether the project will interfere with erection of a new edifice on the present site. Other factors to be considered include whether the new flow of traffic will present a hazard for those attending services and whether the increased auto load will result in too much noise during services.

A closed meeting of the 24 elders of the church was held Sunday to consider action after the Rev. Robert T. Bridge, acting pastor, promised the congregation that "the best interests of the church would be protected." No report of any action taken by the elders was released.

The channelization would open a part of H st. nw. to two-way traffic for the first time in several years, and cut a lane through National Park Service land fronting the church to permit east-west traffic along H st.

Roosevelt Head

Allan Davis, Ex-Principal, Dead at 82

Allan Davis

Allen Davis, known to tens of thousands of Washington students through 50 years as teacher and principal in public schools here, died unexpectedly last night at the home of his daughter near Herndon, Va. He was 82 years old.

Born in Minerva, Ohio, he moved to Washington with his parents in the 1870's and has lived here since. He attended public schools and graduated from Washington High School in the class of 1886. He has been active in reunions of that class.

The same year, he became a faculty member in the same school as an assistant in science. A short time later, he branched into commercial subjects. When the old Business High School was founded in 1890, he was made principal of it.

Roosevelt High Principal

He became principal of Roosevelt High School, which replaced old Business High School in 1932. He retired late in 1936, after he became 70.

Though he was teaching, and later principal, in the schools, he continued to study, taking a degree in science from the old Columbian College, predecessor of George Washington University, and also a degree in law.

Mr. Davis served at different times as secretary and president of the business section of the National Education Association. He helped organize the Federation of Citizens Association in Washington and for a time was a representative of Southeast Washington in that body.

Promoter Pupil Fares

In earlier years, he was active in the campaign for cut-rate streetcar fares for school children, and on another occasion organized a successful fight against the so-called "red rider" proposed by Congressman Thomas Blanton in 1935 to force a loyalty oath from schoolteachers here. He also campaigned at times for increased pay for schoolteachers.

Mr. Davis married Maud Watson, one of the faculty members of the old Business High School. She died in 1947.

He is survived by his sister, Mrs. Eugenia Chesbro; four children, Miss Evelyn Davis, director of the Dance Playhouse; Watson Davis, director of Science Service; Malcolm Davis, head keeper of the National Zoological Park, and Fremont Davis, Science Service staff member and teacher at the University of Maryland, and four grandchildren.

Mr. Davis lived at 900 11th st. se.

Funeral arrangements were not completed last night, but burial will be at Philadelphia.

Mrs. Bourbon Dies; Wife of Senate Aide

Mrs. Gertrude Riley Bourbon, 50, wife of August J. Bourbon, administrative assistant to Senator O'Conor (D., Md.), died yesterday at Georgetown University Hospital of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Mrs. Bourbon collapsed Sunday night while entertaining friends at her home, 2909 Rittenhouse st. nw. She was taken to the hospital about 9 p. m., and died four hours later.

Her husband was executive secretary to O'Conor from 1937 to 1947 when O'Conor was Governor of Maryland. When O'Conor came to the Senate, Bourbon came as his administrative assistant.

Mrs. Bourbon was born in Newport News, Va., and received her education in Panama and later graduated from St. Xavier Academy in Latrobe, Pa. She was a graduate of Mercy Hospital School of Nursing in Baltimore. She and Mr. Bourbon were married in 1922.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by 11 children, two sisters and two brothers.

Funeral arrangements are being handled by the Armacost funeral home in Baltimore.

Mrs. Marie Protzmann

Mrs. Marie Protzmann, 70, who visited in Washington frequently when her son-in-law, Robert E. Hannegan, was Postmaster General and chairman of the Democratic National Committee, died last Friday in St. Louis after a brief illness.

Funeral services and burial were held yesterday in St. Louis.

A native and lifelong resident of St. Louis, Mrs. Protzmann was well known in Government social circles here. She stayed with her daughter, Mrs. Hannegan, who survives, during her visits here.

She is also survived by two other daughters, and a son, all of St. Louis. Her husband, a St. Louis banker, died some years ago.

B. L. Brown Dies While Driving Car

Mr. Brown

Out of control, the Studebaker sedan careened over the north curbstone and lurched down the pavement for about 20 yards before twisting back into the street, then mounted the curb a second time.

A pedestrian, David Williams, 1149 20th st. nw., leaped to the side of the car and tugged at the handbrake stopping it.

Mr. Brown was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. Richard J. Siggers of the Gallinger Hospital staff.

Mr. Brown came to Hecht's in 1942 as executive controller. He resigned in 1948 to join the P. J. Nee Furniture Co., here. Later he left to devote his time to economic consultation work.

Born in Poland, Mr. Brown was brought to this country as an infant. He attended New York University and Cooper Union engineering school.

At one time he served as office manager of Bloomingdale's Department Store, New York, and later was vice president of the Namm Store in Brooklyn.

He was a member of the Masonic order and was once a director of the Federation of Jewish Charities in New York.

He leaves his wife, Augusta, with whom he lived at 3000 39th st. nw., and two sons, Dr. Earl Brown, New York physician, and Roy Brown, also of New York.

Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, acting coroner, said he would perform an autopsy today.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at Riverside Chapel, 75th st. and Amsterdam ave., New York. Burial will be in Mount Hebron Cemetery.

George Haines Rites Today In Hyattsville

Funeral services for George Haines, formerly animal geneticist with the Department of Agriculture's Office of Experiment Stations here, will be held at 1:30 p. m. today at the Gasch Funeral Home, 4739 Baltimore ave., Hyattsville. Burial will be at 3 p. m. Wednesday in Clinton Corners, N. Y. He his home, 1414 died Sunday at 4414 Oliver st., Hyattsville.

Mr. Haines

Mr. Haines, who was with the Department for 24 years until retirement in 1946, had been ill for several years. He was 52.

A native of Millbrook, N. Y., he received his bachelor's and master's degrees in animal husbandry from Cornell University. He taught at Cornell four years before joining the Department. Mr. Haines received a Ph. D. from the University of Maryland in 1929.

He was master of Mount Hermon Masonic Lodge in 1932, and was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Hyattsville. He also belonged to the Society of Animal Production.

In addition to his wife, Mrs. Helena J. Haines, he is survived by a son, Charles E. Haines of the Oliver st. address; two daughters, Mrs. Caroline Wien, Bethlehem, Pa., and Miss Helene P. Haines of the Oliver st. address, and two grandsons.

Mrs. Emma A. Schwab

Mrs. Emma A. Schwab, 76, widow of George H. Schwab, for many years a cashier in the District collector of taxes office, died Sunday night after an illness of a number of years.

She was a charter member of the Petworth Methodist Church and a member of Joppa Lodge, Chapter 27, Order of the Eastern Star. Mrs. Schwab was born in Colesville, Md., June 2, 1873.

She leaves one brother, J. Harry King, 1623 35th st. nw.; two sisters, Mrs. Arthur Edwards of Wilmington, Del., and Mrs. Mabel Heider of Lorton, Va.; four children, George A. Schwab of Tulsa, Okla., Mrs. Gertrude L. Chowans of Norfolk, Va., Mrs. Katherine B. Butler of Oak Grove, Va., and Mrs. Emma S. Wainwright, 4302 3rd st. nw.; seven grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. at Lee's funeral home, 4th st. and Massachusetts ave. ne. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Fred Page

Fred Page, 72, former resident of Detroit who has been living with his daughter, Mrs. Ella P. Glennie, 5320 McKinley st., Bethesda, Md., for the past year, died yesterday at Suburban Hospital.

Mr. Page was born and educated near Detroit. He worked in the plumbing business in that city until nine years ago, when ill health forced him to retire.

In addition to his daughter, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ellen Page, of the McKinley st. address and a son, Carl R. Page, of Detroit.

Funeral services will be held at 4 p. m. Wednesday at the Pumphrey funeral home in Bethesda. Burial will be private.

Mrs. Fred Schilplin

St. Cloud, Minn., Aug. 29 (AP).—Mrs. Fred Schilplin, 78, widow of the publisher and owner of the St. Cloud Times, died Sunday. Prominent in State club work, she was an officer of the Times Publishing Co., Inc., for many years.

Household Hints

Small-sized bath towels are easier for the children to handle and are simple to launder.

By putting the blade of a silver knife on the tongue and leaving it there for a few minutes, obstinate hiccoughs will invariably be checked.

Man in Thirties, Planning Marriage, Feels Duty-Bound to Share Home With Aging Spinster Who Companioned His Mother; Fiancee Worries

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A lady now middle aged has lived in my fiance's home for many years. When she was 18 her parents were killed in a traffic accident, and thereafter she lived with and was treated as a member of Bill's family.

More recently Bill's parents have died, and during the mother's last illness, which lasted several years, Ann assumed many of the household duties and gave up many of her evenings to be with the mother. At the same time she managed to continue her work in a neighborhood store, where she is still employed. She was faithful to Bill's family in those hard years and life has been pretty tedious for her.

Since the mother's death Ann has kept house for Bill and she feels she has earned the right to continue living there; and as she has made few social contacts and has few outside interests, she expects to be a part of our "family life" if and when we marry. This means that most of our plans for recreation and entertaining would have to include her. And I wonder if our marriage could mean very much if we make it a three-way companionship.

Bride-to-Be Wants Conjugal Privacy

BILL IS VERY tender hearted and feels too obligated to Ann to insist that she establish herself in an apartment near us, or find someone else to share a home with her; yet he would be very happy if she would make such arrangements voluntarily. Ann has many good qualities and I want her for a friend; but I feel that our friendship can mean much more if we steer clear of enforced association.

Sometimes I think I can marry Bill, accept the status quo with Ann, and find happiness myself by trying to make his life as happy as possible. Other times I wonder if I can adjust to another woman in the home, always having to compromise in the matter of furnishings, etc. Bill and I are in our early thirties and I've long looked forward to a home of our own. What is the happiest possible solution? C. A.

Spinster Is Hardly Selfless Character

DEAR C. A.: There is no painless solution to the situation. And postponing or evading a reckoning isn't going to make things easier.

Ann probably won't be happy, and doubtless will sulk experimentally, if she is asked or pushed out of Bill's home to give his bride the privacy and authority to which a wife is entitled. And you, on the other hand, can't be happy (nor will she) if you try to put up with her as a fixture in the household.

Moreover, I predict that she is going to be subtly disagreeable to you, if you marry him, regardless of what housing arrangements are made, so long as she thinks she has a chance of exerting inside-track influence on Bill with her sentimental "old retainer" attitudes.

In my opinion, if Ann were the "selfless" character she professes to be, instead of an opportunist who tries to dominate by "service" tactics for lack of other power-weapons; if she were disposed to deal reasonably with you, and act creditably in the immediate circumstance, she would be on her way out of Bill's home already,—at least in the sense of sturdily making plans, in a matter of course way, to be settled elsewhere, by the time you step into double-harness with him.

Three-Way Deal Equals Headache

AS I INTERPRET her present behavior, she is satisfied—i.e., it suits her self-serving maneuvers,—to constitute herself a problem to you by indirectly advertising, with mulish passivity, her intent to cling obstinately to Bill's coat tails. In effect she is daring you to try to change that; and she is counting on Bill's chicken-hearted feeling of obligation, and your sweetheart-dread of offending him, to tide her through, on the inside track, during the crucial engagement period—when it's "then or never" for getting her out.

She anticipates that later, if she hangs on until after marriage, you can't oust her without suffering damage in the eyes of Bill and mutual friends; and she is prepared, I believe, to let that cost befall you, or that threat stymie you, any time, rather than go voluntarily. For advice, you may as well bring the problem to a boil right now and discover, once and for all, whether a clean-cut decision on your behalf can be negotiated through Bill. If he lacks resoluteness for that, marriage to "them" would be a headache for you as long as it lasted. M. H.

Barbara Folger Becomes Bride

Miss Barbara Folger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Folger of Mount Airy, N. C., became the bride on August 27 of Richard Thurmand Chatham, jr., son of Representative Richard T. Chatham and the late Mrs. Lucy Hanes Chatham of Winston-Salem, N. C.

The Rev. Edwin B. Jeffress performed the ceremony at the Trinity Episcopal Church in Mount Airy in the presence of members of the immediate families. Mr. Folger gave his daughter in marriage. With her candlelight satin gown she wore her mother's veil of Brussels lace. Representative Chatham was best man for his son, and Hugh Gwyn Chatham, the bridegroom's brother, and Fred Folger, jr., the bride's brother, served as ushers.

Stanley Feldman, Bride, to Live Here

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Feldman, who were married August 14, will return from their Southern motor trip to make their home in Washington.

The bride is the former Miss Frances Setnick, daughter of Mrs. Doris Setnick, and Mr. Feldman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Feldman, all of this city.

Your Baby

Child-Rearing Demands Love And Patience

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

IN ORDER to rear children and train them successfully parents have to have two attributes: extreme love and patience and in addition must know their subject and show encouragement.

All the miracles wrought in erring children stem from the love their parents express for them. Without that, a parent may do all the right things and the results of her training will be zero.

Parents, poor dears, are impatient. They get tired. They sense their own inadequacies and inexperience. They fear failure and feel they must deal with every bit of undesirable behavior in a drastic manner in order to nip it in the bud.

Children outgrow most of their misbehavior. They don't want to be bad, they want approval and love, but they are young and unknowing. Patience with their growth conduct will pay richer dividends than constant nagging and punishment. So much behavior is just temporary, anyway.

Parents have to know about children in general in order to know their own. The baby sucks its thumb, the mother says, "Oh, he's hungry," and forthwith feeds him. Maybe his sucking is just the attempt to satisfy that desire to suck which is not being met at feeding time.

He cries lustily and she says, "My what a temper!" and with such an interpretation ignores the fact that he may be hungry or uncomfortable and has no other way to express his needs. When parents know children they do not make such ready estimates of behavior. They recognize that it may have far more subtle roots.

Mothers have to be generous with encouragement. It is mother-nature to try to correct faults by dealing with them negatively. "Oh, you never pick up your clothes," they say, as if this would spur the child to do so. "Let's pick up your clothes and I'll bet you can pick up two pieces for every one I pick up," is enough encouragement to challenge the child to do just that.

It's so humiliating to a child to be prodded with criticism until, in the end, he is just what the mother does not want him to be. Speak affirmatively. Tell him the nice person he is instead of saddling him with the reputation for being all the things a mother does not want him to be.

And don't grow weary in the telling. There was never any kind of teaching in any field that did not demand constant, emphatic repetition. Neither Rome nor good children were built in a day.

Thoroughly Dry

The most important thing to remember to make linoleum last longer is to always wipe it dry after washing and thus prevent water from getting into the seams and underneath the fabric.

The Crystal Decanter Should Sparkle

The crystal decanter is usually a very lovely piece of glassware and should be kept clear and sparkling for real beauty. Use a little vinegar and a handful of salt and place the solution in the decanter. Shake well and rinse with clear water afterward.

Careless Smoker

Keep an eye on the smoker who does not care where he throws his cigars, cigarettes and matches when he is through with them.

Accent on Accessories

Accessories are to French fashion what salt is to an egg, says Fashion Editor Elizabeth Ambrose Maderia, reporting on her recent trip to Paris in the Woman's Home Companion.

Mrs. Maderia found a number of general trends which you will want to keep in mind when selecting your own fall outfits. French hats, she notes, fit closely through the crown but often have an effect of height in front.

The narrow under-arm bag, a new-old fashion, looks right with easily cut, casual clothes. Formal bags on the other hand are small and flexible but usually stiffened somewhat to give them shape.

Gloves, says the Companion fashion editor, are increasingly small and delicate, although the handsewn variety is still smart with sports clothes. She also found a swing back toward glace finishes. Altogether accessories are sleek and elegant—they gain their effect through line.

Are You Reducing Your Health, Too?

By Ida Jean Kain

MOST people are in favor of a strict reducing diet—that includes all the food they like to eat. They continue to dine on delectable carbohydrates and succulent fats, and show remarkable will power in leaving out milk and green, leafy vegetables . . . the protective foods.

Whenever I am inclined to think I'm Jeanie-one-note on the protective food theme song—everybody knows I do stress them—someone writes and asks if she could lose weight on practically nothing but desserts as long as she stays within her reducing calorie limits. She could lose weight . . . and her health right along with it.

And never will I forget the letter from an overweight requesting a particularly lopsided diet that I had condemned as being so inadequate I wouldn't recommend it to anyone. She "reasoned" that since she couldn't stay within the bounds of a diet anyway and always ate more than the diet allowed, the poor diet couldn't hurt her. By that plan, our overweight would neither reduce nor be well fed.

And that's somewhat the way it is with many would-be reducers. So here we go again.

On a reducing diet, the foods included must keep you healthy. Every food must furnish its full share of the nutrients that make good the daily wear and tear in order to protect your health.

Never overlook the fact that even while pounds are being lost, the body does not use less fuel or repair and regulating material. The source of supply is changed from food to body storage. It's perfectly safe to call on stored calories for part of the daily energy needs—that's the way fat is lost. But since there is no effective reserve of repair and regulating material, these must be furnished every day in the food eaten, not in reduced amounts but in normal amounts . . . even in abundance, so as to enhance the reducer's feeling of well-being.

Here is the list of foods that furnish the needed protection and help you to grow younger as you grow slimmer. Who could ask for anything more?

All this and healthy streamlines, too.

DAILY FOOD PATTERN

Skim milk or buttermilk—1 pint
Or 1 ounce of yellow cheese and 1 glass of milk
Eggs—1 or 2
Fruits—1 citrus; 1 or 2 others
Vegetables—1 dark green leafy; 2 others.
Meat (lean), fish or fowl—4 to 6 oz.
Bread (wholegrain or enriched)—3 thin slices.
Or cereal and 1 slice of bread
Butter or margarine—2 pats
Water—6 glasses a day
1 multiple vitamin concentrate if diet is extended.

How to Prevent Blackened Tops

The tops of catsup and condiment bottles soon form a discolored edge on both the bottle and the inside of the metal cap. The first time the bottle is opened, place a piece of waxed paper over the top and put the metal cap over this protected surface. It will keep it smooth and clean.

Poorly Washed

Flannels that have been poorly washed and are hard and shrunken can be restored to their former softness by soaking them in gasoline for a few hours. Then wash in soft soapsuds as usual. Rinse in the same temperature clear water.

A New Recipe

When the new cake you are trying seems to brown before it is done, reduce the heat and cover the cake with a piece of brown paper. Continue the baking and the cake will not brown any more.

Washington Branch of AAUW Elect Mrs. Aaron Brumbaugh

By Genevieve Reynolds

MRS. AARON J. BRUMBAUGH was elected president of the Washington Branch, American Association of University Women at a meeting attended by about 100 members last night in national headquarters to complete reorganizational plans.

The reorganized branch, which officially was reconstituted July 18 as the new Washington branch of the association, is composed of members who did not withdraw from the national organization. A majority of the original branch withdrew after the AAUW convention voted 2168 to 65, to make educational qualifications the sole requirement for membership.

Split in the local branch arose when Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, a distinguished Negro graduate of Oberlin College applied for readmission into the branch. Mrs. Terrell who had been a member of the group between 1905-1910 had allowed her membership to elapse due to pressure of other duties. Upon the insistence of Mrs. Clarence F. Swift, a former college mate and long-time friend, Mrs. Terrell applied for reinstatement.

Mrs. Terrell Rejoins

She was reinstated at the meeting last night along with two other Negro women—Miss Otelia Cromwell and Miss Mary E. Cromwell, sisters, who had been members with Mrs. Terrell some 30 years ago.

Adoption of a by-laws provision by the original Washington branch shortly after the dispute gave the local group a right to screen applicants. Upon that technicality, Mrs. Terrell was barred from membership. The mother organization entered the fray and sided with the minority group in the Washington branch.

Members of the local group who refused to comply with the AAUW's national by-laws admitting all qualified college women, irrespective of color, withdrew and set up the University Women's Club with headquarters at 1515 New Hampshire ave. nw. It now operates as a local club.

Mrs. Terrell came in from her summer home on the Eastern Shore of Maryland for last night's election of officers and victory meeting of the reconstituted branch of which she is a member. Shortly after being barred from the D. C. branch, she became a member of the New York AAUW as well as the national association.

Mrs. Swift, who sponsored Mrs. Terrell, cut short a New York stay to offer congratulations.

Other Officers

Elected to serve with the new president were Miss Dorothy Swift, first vice president; Mrs. Edward A. Chapin, second vice president; Miss Margaret E. Flory, recording secretary; Miss Charlotte Anne McGuire, corresponding secretary; Miss Laura Grace Hunter, treasurer.

Named to the board of directors were Mrs. Barrow Lyons, Miss Mary Agnes Brown and Dr. Esther Brunauer.

Mrs. Ruth Voorhis Lyons, who led the minority group in its fight against discrimination and has headed the reorganization, said that present indications are that the branch will have a membership of more than 500 by the end of the year.

On Maine Holiday

Mr. and Mrs. Timothy A. Boyd have been vacationing at Christmas Tree Inn, Bridgton, Me.

On the Club Front . . .

P. F. Lambert was elected president of the National Photographic Society, according to an announcement made by the board of trustees.

Mr. Lambert, who is engaged in research work for the Department of National Defense, will fill the unexpired term of Miss Gladys Hamlin who is leaving Washington for Ames, Iowa.

Two French Students Here Before Taking Study Course

The International Activities Branch of the American National Red Cross has a number of interesting visitors during the course of a year. Just now there are two French scholarship students here, Miss Jacqueline Vacherot and Miss Jane Martin.

After a year's visit in the United States, the two will return to Paris, where they will establish the first postgraduate school for nurses in France. Miss Martin will spend the coming year studying the teaching of nursing at Syracuse University in Syracuse, N. Y., and Miss Vacherot will be at the University of Texas in Houston.

As members of the French Red Cross, both nurses are experienced and well fitted for responsibilities. Miss Vacherot has spent the past year in the Middle East, nursing victims of epidemics which broke out among displaced Arabs after partition was signed.

She lived in tents in the desert of Trans-Jordan for four months, and for two months she was chief Red Cross nurse at Beirut, Lebanon. The League of Red Cross nurses, she said, was requested by U. N. to send nurses to the Middle East when the epidemics broke out, and Miss Vacherot was one of four French nurses on the scene.

Miss Martin has just completed a year's work as head of Red Cross nurses in the Black Forest of Germany, in French-occupied territory. There she nursed French veterans who contracted T. B. as prisoners of war. A majority of the patients were men who were taken from German concentration camps, and brought to the Black Forest to be healed before returning to France. Formerly there were 16 houses full of patients, but now three houses have been shut down, leaving just 13.

Before coming to Washington, Miss Martin and Miss Vacherot had just three weeks in Paris. There they found everyday living approaching what it was before the war.

The French woman, Miss Martin said, had the job of keeping up morale during the war, and now she has the task of bringing broken threads back into a family unit.

Warrenton's Horse Show Set For Sept. 4, 5

Festivities at Warrenton, Va., for the golden anniversary Warrenton Horse show are now timed like clockwork for the two-day meet, Sunday and Monday, September 4 and 5.

The golden anniversary ball will be held at the Spring Field Club on Saturday, preceding the first day of the show and there are numerous cocktail parties planned beforehand. Members of the younger horsey set will be entertained at dinner by Mr. and Mrs. Gregory McIntosh who will be hosts for their daughters, Joan and Molly.

The William Schlusemeyers will give a small cocktail party before the ball and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Greene will entertain on Labor Day at a luncheon for the judges of the show.

Martin Vogel, jr., the Alex Calverts and the William Doellers will give parties as will Mr. and Mrs. William Wilbur and Capt. and Mrs. J. L. Bentley who will give a luncheon on Sunday before the show opens. The horse show committee will entertain the exhibitors, directors and a few out-of-town friends, at cocktails on Monday.

Congressional Wives Sail for European Trip

Off for an interesting European holiday are Mrs. William R. Poage, wife of the Texas Representative, and Mrs. Harold D. Cooley, wife of the North Carolina Representative. They sailed Saturday aboard the Queen Elizabeth, accompanied by Mr. Cooley's sister, Mrs. Mildred Sanders. After visiting London, Ireland and Scotland, the group will fly to Sweden, where they expect to be joined by Representatives Poage and Cooley, who will go as delegates to the Inter-parliamentary Union Conference. The conference will open September 7 in Stockholm.

Chances are that in Ireland the lawmakers' wives will run into Representative and Mrs. Daniel Reed of New York, last heard from in the Emerald Island capital. And they are likely to meet Mrs. Ralph Church, president of the Congressional Club, in Paris or in the Scandinavian countries. Mrs. Church has been touring the Continent for a couple of months.

New Zealand Envoy Returns From Trip

The Ambassador of Ne wZealand and Lady Berendsen have returned from a tour of South America. Several weeks ago they sailed from New York on a freighter which touched at six South American ports. In Brazil, the Ambassador and Lady Berendsen saw the British Ambassador, Sir Nevile Butler, and in Buenos Aires, British Ambassador, Sir John Balfour, and Lady Balfour. The return trip was made by plane from Buenos Aires, with a day in Lima, Peru, for shopping.

George Allins Have Son

Maj. and Mrs. George R. Allin, jr., are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, Thomas Banbury Allin, their second son, on August 25 at Walter Reed Hospital. The baby is the grandson of Gen. and Mrs. George R. Allin of Carmel, Calif.

In Summer's Orange Blossom Procession

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Kemp announce the marriage of their daughter, Mary Lee, to Carl Albert Alexander of Steubenville, Ohio, August 27, at St. Ann's Catholic Church.

Mrs. Lena Vanni of Philadelphia, Pa., the bridegroom's sister, and Anthony Meushaw were honor attendants for the couple. Mr. and Mrs. Alexander will make their home in Washington.

Mrs. Alexander was graduated from the University of Maryland where she was a member of Alpha Xi Delta and Phi Kappa Phi sororities. Mr. Alexander also attended the University of Maryland. His fraternity was Delta Sigma Phi.

Mettger—Brunner

Miss Sue Brunner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Brunner of Boise, Idaho, was married August 27 at All Souls Unitarian Church to Phillip Mettger, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Mettger of Chicago, Ill. The Rev. Gilbert A. Phillips officiated.

Wearing navy taffeta and carrying pink carnations and roses, the bride was given in marriage by Frederick Mann. Miss Dorothy Jenny was maid of honor and Richard V. Woodruff served as best man. The ushers were James Grahl and Kenneth Clark.

Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Lott of Chevy Chase, Md., were hosts at a reception following the ceremony. The newlyweds will sail from New York September 3 on the S. S. America for a honeymoon in Europe. They met in Stuttgart, where Mr. Mettger served with the American government in Germany. He is a graduate of Northwestern University and the Syracuse University School of Citizenship and Public Affairs. Mrs. Mettger, who has been a State Department foreign service officer for three and a half years, was graduated from the University of Idaho.

Be It Ever So Temporary, Make It Like Home

By Ann Pringle

HOME isn't just where you hang your hat. At least, not for most people. It must be fine to be so at home with yourself that your external environment is of little importance. People who haven't reached that exalted state, however, have a way of needing "little things" around them that give them a feeling of belonging, that tell them they're home.

In a permanent dwelling, most people acquire these things to a point where they must periodically and ruthlessly toss some of them out. But what about the transients? What about hotel dwellers, furnished room tenants and all the people "getting ahead" in the city who live in furnished apartments because they don't feel ready to settle down yet? And how about those families that settle for furnished places because nothing else is available?

One person I know, who has one of those semihomes she doesn't want to spend money on, but which probably will be her home for a year at least, keeps one trunkful of movable belongings that she can surround herself with in any room or apartment she may be living in at the moment.

Probably the most important of them to her are two pictures. One is an original and one a print, and neither cost a fortune. But she bought both of them because they meant something important to her, and when she gets them up on the wall, the room, whatever its furnishings, seems less strange and more her own.

The point I'm getting at is that even a temporary home can be made attractive and pleasant. I've known people to live three or four years in an apartment, making no improvements because they were always looking for something better. They might better have spent some of that energy on the place they'd already found.

Ask Anne
About Decorating Recreation Room

Is there a "correct" way to decorate a table-tennis room? My husband takes this sport very seriously, and half the basement will be converted into a room for it. Is green the best color for the walls? Since we both have a sincere appreciation for the West, I had thought of giving the room a Western atmosphere, but my husband seems to think this inappropriate. Would bright curtains or inside shutters be out of place for the tiny, high window on a cinder-block wall? S.D.P.

It seems to me that the only important points to keep in mind in decorating a table tennis room is to have adequate light, plenty of space around the table for playing and to have the walls in a color dark enough to follow the ball easily. Green would be a good color or since most basement rooms are dark and cool you might choose a warm color such as a bright yellow.

Why don't you decorate the room with pictures of the equipment used to play the game? You could hang the rackets on the wall, or if you are handy at sketching, you could sketch on the wall in pencil interesting groupings of rackets, nets, etc. After they are sketched in go over them with paint. To be most effective, the drawings should be simple and the objects outlined should be in bold colors or black so they will stand out well.

The tiny window could be draped with a table-tennis net, or a bright cretonne. To make the window larger and a more important part of the room decoration, you could make a wood frame for it large enough to frame the window and several shelves. Make the frame to exactly fit the window at the sides and top. At the bottom of the window, the frame should extend down the wall far enough to permit placing several narrow shelves under the window. The wall back of the shelves could be painted a light color. On the shelves you could put colorful miniature decorative objects. Drape the window and shelves as one large window.

We have a 9-by-12 playroom for the children (both preschoolers). I have an old, slightly worn rug which just fills this space, and helps take the chill off the floor. The rug has a rose background, with a pattern in all colors. Is there any inexpensive and easy way I can convert this rug into a decorating asset for the playroom — possibly by changing it all to a solid color?

There is really no satisfactory way to dye the rug a solid color at home. The only way to change the rug to a solid color easily and inexpensively would be to turn it over and paint the reverse side with awning or a good grade of floor paint. Used this way the rug will have the appearance and texture of a summer rug, but would offer more protection from chill because of the pile. I do not recommend painting the reverse side of the rug if you ever plan to use it again as it now is, because paint may soak through to the pile side. Also, the pile may become very matted from using it reverse side up.

If you do decide to paint it, buy one of the excellent awning paints or use a good grade of floor paint thinned with turpentine, one part of turpentine to three parts paint. Apply it with a cheap brush so that the paint can be well worked into the fibers of the rug.

The walls in our new home have a stipled finish and are painted in pastel colors. Can you tell me how I should clean them to preserve the finish and the lovely colors? C. F. H.

If you have washable paint on the walls, you can wash them with mild soap or one of the washing powders made especially for cleaning walls and woodwork. When washing, rub lightly so as not to break the paint coat. When using washing powders, be sure to follow the directions which come with powder you use, taking particular care not to use it more concentrated than the manufacturers recommend to avoid removing gloss and paint.

You will be able to delay the time when a general all-over washing is necessary by removing the dust from the walls each week with the brush attachment of your vacuum sweeper or a clean long-handled brush. By doing this, when any moisture comes in contact with the wall, it does not leave a soiled spot. Another precautionary measure is to frequently remove finger marks and smudges around doors, light switches as soon as they appear. This can be done by lightly washing these areas as described above.

Can you tell me where I might find some literature or history on the Little Church Around the Corner in New York? L. G. C.

I would suggest that you write the Little Church Around the Corner, 29th st. at 5th ave., New York, N. Y., stating your questions and inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope. They can undoubtedly send you a leaflet or otherwise supply the information you want about the church.

Your Palms Foretell Future

By Betty Clarke

Associated Press Newsfeatures Writer

Palmistry certainly isn't a lost art—men still analyze hands and fingertips. They might not be able to tell you that your squarish-tipped fingers denote creative ability or that oval-tipped fingers are a sign of a poised woman—they'll leave that to party palmists. But they can spot hands that have character.

An attractive movie actor said recently that the two most important features a woman possesses are her hands and hair. If she would just keep them beautiful, shining and clean, he claimed, she could hope to win a man.

One might say that is a question of opinion. There are lots of beautifully groomed women who never get a man. On the other hand there are plenty of women who have won their men on farms or in factories where busy hands can be anything but shining.

But your chances certainly will be greater if your hands do not tattle that you are careless about grooming.

Hands love pampering. A good lemon lotion is made by combining two parts fresh lemon juice, one part rubbing alcohol, one part glycerine and a drop or two of perfume. This is an excellent conditioner. Use it on elbows, too, while you are about it. Scrub them first with warm soapy water and a bit of pumice stone.

Smooth the lotion down over each finger toward the wrist, as you would in putting on a glove. This will help to reduce puffiness around the knuckles. In a whirling motion, work cream into each finger from nail to palm.

Keep the lotion in your desk or locker while working at the office; put it on the kitchen shelf at home for use directly after dishwashing and other household chores.

If you have short fingers and a chunky hand, you can try to elongate them by making the nails seem longer. This may be done by coating the entire nail with polish and by massaging the fingers, pulling and smoothing them from knuckles to fingertips.

From Tante Marie's Cookbook

HAVE you seen that new book on French cookery that is actually a translation? Titled "Tante Marie's French Kitchen," it was adapted by Charlotte Turgeon from a French classic "La Veritable Cuisine de Famille par Tante Marie."

For generations, say its publishers (Oxford University Press), Tante Marie has been as familiar a household phrase in France as Fanny Farmer has been in this country. Her cookbook isn't an elaborate treatise for chefs about complicated dishes. It's a practical guide to the preparation of those basic and simple dishes for which French home cooking is famous. Everything from hors d'oeuvres to desserts is covered. Miss Turgeon had adapted measurements and directions to the modern American kitchen.

For a sample, here is Tante Marie's recipe for the famous French brioche. She warns that time and patience are required to make this delicious bread, which should be started the day before it is used.

BRIOCHE

1 yeast cake, dissolved in
¼ cup water
1½ cups flour
3 large eggs
1 cup softened butter
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar

Dissolve the yeast in warm water and mix with ½ cup flour. Make a gash in top of the mass and place in a bowl of warm water to make a sponge. This will double in size. Meanwhile, work the unbeaten egg into the rest of the flour. Add a little warm water if it is too dry to beat. It should be beaten 10 minutes. Hands are the best tool for this operation. Add butter, salt, and sugar and combine 5 minutes longer. Remove the yeast sponge from the water and combine the mixture, but do not mix it any longer than necessary. Cover and let rise three to four hours or until doubled. Knead it down and place in cool place overnight. It is ready for baking the next morning. The brioche dough should then be broken down gently so that it will remain light. It may be baked in a loaf, on a buttered cookie sheet, or in a buttered ring mold. Let the brioche rest in the pan 30 minutes before baking. Bake 30 to 35 minutes in 450-degree oven. Cover with buttered unglazed paper if the brioche browns too much. Test by inserting a needle in the bread. If it comes our dry, the bread is done. Serve hot with butter.

Fabulous Tweeds for Fall

MAD PLAID--Dashing reefer in winter-weight tweed combining turquoise, shocking pink and olive. All are designed by Forstmann

CHIFFON WEIGHT—Adele Simpson uses sheer tweed in a gray diamond weave for her fly-front coat dress with wing pockets

By Dorothy Roe

Associated Press Staff Writer

THE 1950 FASHION story runs to tweeds, newly glorified by American fabric manufacturers and served up in finishes as light as chiffon and as soft as silk.

Time was when the word "tweed" called to mind the stiff, scratchy woolens always used by novelists to clothe the lovable but careless he-man and invariably teamed with the smell of good tobacco.

Today's smooth and supple versions are more likely to be scented with French perfume and to be worn by the femme fatale.

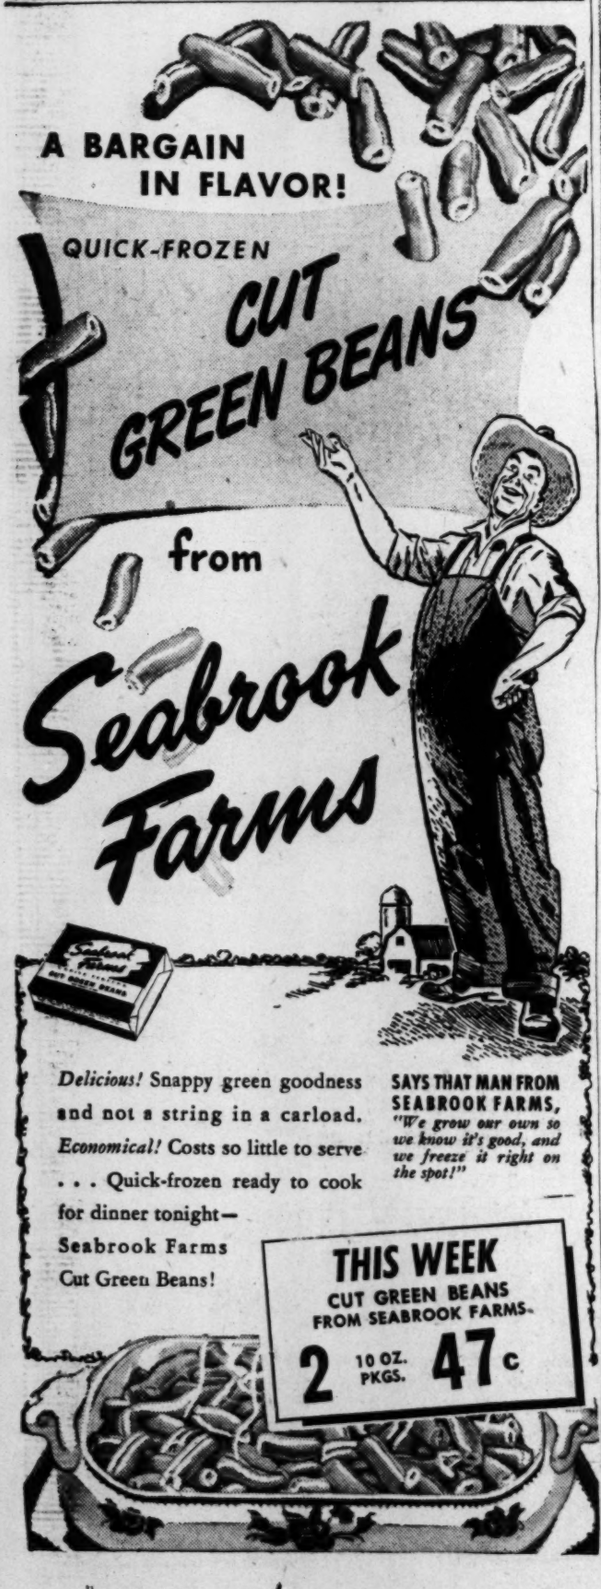
Chiffon-weight tweeds shown in most major New York dress collections this fall made headline news because, while they had all the texture interest and richness of the old-fashioned variety, they draped as smoothly as satin and were featherweight in the hand.

Americans always have had a sentimental fondness for good tweeds, and now they may indulge in it to their hearts' content. For the new, soft tweeds are supple enough for evening gowns, smooth enough for coat dresses, admirable for suits and in heavier weights handsome for town or country coats.

This year you'll find a tweed weight for practically any purpose, and you'll find soft, glowing colors with a misty, muted look that fit the mood of the times.

Some of the new tweeds have almost an iridescent quality, others are big and bold in plaid patterns. Some are sheer, some are soft and warm.

While England and Scotland have held for many years the top reputation for fine tweeds, they will have to look to their laurels this year. American manufacturers are turning out tweeds so handsome and versatile that anyone may well be proud of the label—"Made in U. S. A."



Delicious! Snappy green goodness and not a string in a carload. Economical! Costs so little to serve . . . Quick-frozen ready to cook for dinner tonight—Seabrook Farms Cut Green Beans!

SAYS THAT MAN FROM SEABROOK FARMS, "We grow our own so we know it's good, and we freeze it right on the spot!"

Ham and Asparagus

This is an enticing June entree: On thin slices of cooked ham lay bright green asparagus spears, cooked and buttered. Top with a poached egg, sprinkle on some shredded cheese and broil slowly just long enough to melt the cheese.

A Neat Luncheon Trick

Crusty puppies are a neat luncheon trick. To make them, says the Woman's Home Companion, roll out biscuit dough ⅛-inch thick, cut in strips 3 or 4 inches. Spread with prepared mustard, wrap around frankfurters and bake on a cooky sheet for 15 minutes in a hot oven.

Crippled Briton Can't Use Money For Cure in U. S.

New York, Aug. 29 (AP)—A crippled Englishman, who said he was regaining the use of his withered limbs, watched the door to possible recovery slam in his face today for lack of funds. Yet he has plenty of money.

He is David E. Beards, 37, who came to the United States eight months ago for treatment of multiple sclerosis, a crippling disease of the nervous system. He was unable to get treatment in England.

He went to Kabat-Kiser Institute in Oakland, Calif., where he regained use of his right arm, and his left improved.

Finally, he gave up the treatments because he could not pay for them, although he has enough money in England.

"The whole thing is ironic," Beards said as he was carried aboard a London-bound airliner. "I have the money but I can't use it."

Special School Plans for Army Youth Dropped

Plans for a special school for Army youngsters living at Fort Myer, South Post, or Arlington Farms, have been dropped, Superintendent William A. Early said yesterday.

The elementary school, which was to be housed in converted Army barracks at one of the posts, was scheduled to care for about 250 Army children, according to an announcement made last week.

The proposal was dropped, however, Early said, when the Army informed the county it had decided to pay tuition for most of the children in District schools. About 50 youngsters will still attend county schools at Woodmont Elementary, Dolly Madison Junior High, and Washington-Lee Senior High, Early said.

Man Arrested In Fruit Store On Gaming Charge

Vice squad detectives yesterday arrested Eaton A. Boyd, 40, of 420 12th st. se., on charges of setting up a gaming table, operation of a lottery and possession of numbers slips.

Lieut. Roy Blick, vice squad chief, said Boyd was arrested without a warrant in Jimmie's Fruit Basket, 235 Pennsylvania ave. se., by detectives who were "looking for somebody."

Blick said the detectives found him behind a curtain in the rear of the store, seated at a table on which were numbers slips and race horse bets.

Allies Inn Owner Leaves Estate Of $292,000

Miss Emma T. Hahm, who died here August 11, left an estate of more than $292,000, it was learned yesterday when a petition to probate her will was filed in District Court.

Mrs. Hahm, until recently an owner of the Allies Inn, 1703 New York ave. nw., resided at 6036 Oregon ave. nw.

She leaves $1000 to the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, with the bulk of the remainder of her estate divided among six sisters and two brothers.

FCC Asks to See Color TV Tests

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday told three broadcasting and television companies to be ready for complete "tests and demonstrations" when hearings on color television open here September 26.

The hearings are to determine whether FCC will authorize general color television, in addition to the present black and white transmission.

In identical letters to the Columbia Broadcasting System, the Radio Corporation of America and Color Television, Inc., acting FCC Chairman Paul A. Walker said he wanted the tests and demonstrations to be as complete as possible for the infant industry.

"The commission hopes and expects that the tests and demonstrations presented shall include reception by receivers located under varying typical conditions," he said. "It is hoped that as large a number of receivers as possible will be available for demonstration purposes."

He said the more information the commission has the better it can determine such things as technical feasibility and general public acceptance of the respective systems.

Earlier, FCC Member Robert F. Jones chided the Columbia Broadcasting System for "failure" to furnish the commission with color television sets or converters to view its recent color television demonstration here.

Color TV Held Only In Laboratory Stage

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—A television manufacturer expressed belief today that color video still was "at least four years away."

Benjamin Abrams, president of Emerson Radio and Phonograph Corp., said that while color television had been successfully demonstrated, "it still is in the laboratory stage and it will be years before it will be available for the general public."

Abrams said that at the present stage of development of color television, he did not believe manufacturers could turn out adapters for present sets for less than $300 to $500. And he estimated a set built specifically for color would cost around $1,000.

The Swing of the Pendulum

Parents who have been severely disciplined when they were children are apt to swing to the other extreme and avoid any guidance of their children. Parents who feel that they were not punished enough as children may be very severe with their youngsters. If we have been unhappy, we may do everything possible to be sure that our children are never upset.

An extreme attitude about this will mean that they become "spoiled." Parents who as children felt they didn't have proper clothes may go "whole hog" in showering their own youngsters with clothing.

It's interesting to see how often the pendulum swings from one extreme to the other.

It is important for us to try to understand how we react to our childhood experiences. If we can develop a clear realization of why we feel as we do, there's a good chance of us being able to travel in the middle of the road in our relations with our children.

The Lyons Den . . .

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK—Prof. Malala Sekera, one of the leaders of the World Buddhist movement, professor of philosophy at the University of Calcutta, and head of India's Academy of Arts, went to Hawaii to deliver some lectures. On his way back he stopped in Hollywood, where he wanted to visit a film studio . . . Leo Rosten, the screen writer, phoned three studios to get him a visitor's pass, but the studios refused. Warner Bros. finally admitted him . . . Rosten complained of this to Walter Wanger: "Can you imagine studios turning down this eminent philosopher, this Buddhist leader, this head of India's Academy of Arts?" . . . "Your approach was wrong," said Fenton. "I'd have started my conversation with the studios by saying: 'Do you realize that a movie dubbed into Hindustani can gross $750,000?"

Before the Japanese swimming team left Tokyo for its swimming meets in Los Angeles, they were received by General MacArthur who told them: 'Now, boys, I have only two bits of advice to offer you: If defeated, be serene. If victorious, be modest" . . . Hironoshin Furuhashi, the 21-year-old champion who broke a series of world records, was asked to speak. "General," he said, "I was going to say something which is neither serene nor modest. I was going to try to bring back to Japan, on the anniversary of the signing of the Japanese surrender, the victories in the 400 and 1500 meter events."

Arthur Kennedy of "Champion," "The Window" and "Death of a Salesman," worked in the WPA Federal Theater Production of "Life and Death of an American." It was presented at the Maxine Elliott Theater and Kennedy and the others started rehearsing in the ladies' lounge. A guard protested, and Kennedy told him: "In the theater, we rehearse wherever we can. I'm not on WPA. I was brought in to help with his show. And I'll rehearse here" . . . "You'll hear about this from the WPA," the guard warned him . . . Long after the show opened and closed, and Kennedy went to Hollywood for film assignments, he received a letter which had followed him for years. It read: "It is against the rules of the Federal Theater to rehearse in the ladies' lounge"—and it was signed by Gen. Brehon Somervell.

WANT-AD WONDERS

1500 BRITAINS WANTED TO CLIMB TO SUCCESS!
A steeple-jack advertising in the London Times for an apprentice tried to tell all the bad features of the work. But the $60-a-week job still seemed so attractive that 1,500 young men applied!
Ancient Rome's "Si Qui" notices were the Want Ads of that time.

Potato Bugs Inch Deep On Tracks Snarl Train

Milan, Aug. 29 (AP)—Potato bugs snarled train service between Milan and Como today. Locomotives lost traction on slippery rails, and were reduced to a crawl or forced to stop as millions of the bugs swarmed on the tracks.

Train crews sprayed tons of acid on the rails as the beetles piled more than an inch high.

West Virginia Schools Get Big Lunch Fund

Morgantown, W. Va., Aug. 29 (AP). A total of $1,215,067 in Federal funds will be received by West Virginia for its 1949-50 school lunch program, it was announced today.

Miss Martha Bonar, school lunch supervisor of the State Education Department, said the amount includes $1,189,520 for public schools and $25,547 for private schools.

Funds allocated to the states are used to reimburse participating schools for a part of local purchases of food for school lunches, she explained.

Seeks Housing Priority

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 29.—A recommendation that additional housing project work be started in Martinsburg has been made by Congressman Harley O. Staggers, according to a letter received by Mayor Carl L. Wellinger.

Staggers informed Wellinger that top priority for awards under the Government's new low-rent housing program will be given to cities hardest hit by unemployment. Staggers said he called the Public Housing administrator concerning the proper steps for Martinsburg to receive priority for a low-rent housing project.

TRY IT

STRETCH AND SHAPE AN OLD FELT HAT

Old felt hats can be shaped and styled to make new novel hats that will arouse a lot of interest. See if Dad or Mother can round up an old felt hat that has been discarded. Be sure that you ask for a hat, for even though it is frazzled and worn, it may be Dad's favorite hunting or fishing hat. Don't spoil his luck or humor by taking it.

After you get the hat, remove the inner lining, the outer and inner bands, and with a pair of scissors cut away the brim. Place the hat in hot, not boiling water, for one minute, and then stretch it in any shape you want it with your hands.

If you want a tall hat, as illustrated, stretch it slowly over the round end of a ball bat. Be careful not to pull too hard, for you might push the bat right on through! Let it dry on your head to get the correct size and decorate in any way you choose.

TOMORROW — TURN OVER AND OVER BY CARTWHEEL.

What's the Verdict

WRONG HAIRCUT

Q. In preparation for entering her thoroughbred Jones terrier in an important dog show, Mrs. Z sent it to a veterinarian for trimming. "You're sure you know the proper trim for a Jones?" she asked, and the veterinarian assured her he did. However, his workman mistook the dog for a Sealyham, and trimmed it accordingly, and there was no way to repair the damage before time for the dog show. Mrs. Z had counted on selling the dog after a victory in the show, and she demands damages of the veterinarian. Is she entitled to them?

A. The veterinarian would be responsbile for such provable damages as were caused by the wrong haircut, even though it was his workman and not himself who made the error. The trouble with Mrs. Z's claim is the virtual impossibility of proving damages. She couldn't prove that her dog would have won, or what price she could have got for it under varying results of the judging. She could recover the cost of the haircut, plus probable nominal damages for loss of the opportunity to show the dog. Nor would she be able to recover for the humiliation she might feel as a dog breeder with an improperly groomed purebred. The dog's outraged feelings would gain him no damages, either.

If You Had Stayed

If you had lingered at my side . . . Until the stars came out . . . There would have been no tears to hide . . . Or any dream to doubt . . . There would have been no cloud of gray . . . Or raindrop in your eyes . . . But every night and every day . . . You would have loved the skies . . . The skies of blue when dawn is here . . . And those of red and gold . . . When evening hours disappear . . . And memories unfold . . . If only you had stayed with me . . . And you had whispered yes . . . I would have spent eternity . . . To bring you happiness.

BARNABY

My Fairy Godfather made the pearls. By irritating clams. And when they were ready, he pulled up the net and there they were. Only Sergeant Ausdauer came along and Mr. O'Malley dove off the pier. . .
Huh? A fairy tale—
He's overly tired, Officer.
Yeah. He probably wandered down to the shore and found the pearls in shallow water.
Isn't he a darling little boy?

MARAGON REVISITED

After scanning a typical Johnny Maragon expense account as reproduced in the newspapers last week, H. T. Erich of 2606 Connecticut ave. nw., sighs: "We need more Maragons." (District Liner Erich is a bartender by trade.)

William Osten of 1436 Fairmont st. nw. thinks Nelson Eddy got off a pretty good crack on a recent program. After singing "Where or When," Nelson mused:

"There's a hot one. The guy has loved a girl, but he doesn't remember where or when. Reminds me of those Washington 5 per centers."

William H. Hammack of 4302 28th pl., Mount Rainier, Md., tells me that he has a kitchen clock which keeps going: "tick, tick, tick, tick."

HELP WANTED

A few days ago, Janet Tulloch of 3800 Florence dr., Alexandria, Va., wrote a "letter to the editor" suggesting that adults suffering from cerebral palsy should form a club.

Janet reports that the results clearly indicate that there is a great desire and need for such an organization to provide social contacts for folks who seldom get a chance to meet people.

The club could meet each month, says Janet, if it could solve two major problems:

1. A downtown meeting place, either on the ground floor or equipped with elevator service, and

2. Transportation.

Janet asks that anybody interested in the project contact her at King 8-8973.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Jim Wilfong, jr., of 1541 Montana ave. ne. wonders:

"Why does a playpen take away so much more room from adults than it gives to the child?"

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. F. Kerson, 515 Rock Creek Church rd. nw.: Our circulation director is checking on the incident, and will report to you soon. Thanks for telling us about it.

GOOD HEAVENS!

Andy F. Kisacky of 4802 Sultland rd. se. raises an interesting point. He says:

"When you greet a friend in the morning, you say 'good morning.' When you greet him in the afternoon, you say 'good afternoon.' When you greet him in the evening, you say 'good evening.'

"So why is it that when you greet him at night, you don't say 'good night,' as one might expect?"

I don't know, Andy. I guess it's for the same reason that when Uncle Sam gives a guy "Greetings," it usually means "goodbye."

TRY, TRY AGAIN

Mark Penn suggests that the theme song for our struggling (but still Wondrous) Nats should be: "Forever Endeavor."

AMERICAN KNOW-HOW

W. H. "Uncle Nung" Moulton of 8 Riverside dr., Wilmington, Del., sends in a sequel to my story of the railroad that took the last car off all its trains.

"A Dallas waitress showed similar ingenuity," he writes. "After a number of complaints about the top cake in a stack of wheats being cold, she always kept the middle one on top."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Marine General Stirs Up Furore

(Editor's Note—While Drew Pearson is on vacation, the Washington Merry-Go-Round is being written by his old partner, Robert S. Allen.)

By Robert S. Allen

The famed fighting corps has been serenely out of the limelight while Army, Navy and Air Force brasshats have starred nervously before sensational congressional probes. But Marine Maj. Gen. Graves B. Erskine has changed all that down in San Diego.

Erskine

He has succeeded in stirring up a furious tumult in the area.

The scrappy San Diego Journal is gnashing its teeth at Erskine in boxcar headlines, county and State officials are blasting him as a high-handed martinet, and Congressman Clinton D. McKinnon is demanding a public investigation. Alarmed Defense Secretary Louis Johnson has rushed an assistant to the city to check on the matter.

Cause of the uproar was Erskine's order to use Navy funds to set up a private grade school in Camp Pendleton, which he commands. Local and State educational authorities hotly contend this is contrary to California law. They also charge Erskins with being rude and autocratic.

He argues he has acted within his rights.

To this, Dr. John S. Carroll, county superintendent of schools, retorted, "General Erskine is nicking the public purse to set up an independent school system in a State whose constitution already provides a public school system. His action is basically un-American. The general apparently carries too much brass to waste his time on mere civilians."

Adding fuel to the noisy clash is the fact that this is not the first time Erskine has rowed with local authorities.

They crossed swords last year over a bus franchise. Oceanside, which adjoins Camp Pendleton, established a bus line to serve families of the post living in the town. Under arrangements imposed by Erskine, the bus line operated in the red for months. Then, abruptly, he barred the municipal buses entirely and granted an exclusive franchise to an outside private company.

Erskine's legal officer at the time was Marine Capt. William H. Daubney. Two weeks later Daubney appeared before the Oceanside City Council as the civilian attorney of the private company.

In this capacity he offered to buy out the municipal system on condition his concern got a 10-year exclusive franchise.

Renovated Capitol

Despite a protracted local building workers' strike, renovation of the Senate and House chambers will be completed by December 15, the deadline date. Under spurring of Capitol architects, the lost time has already been made up.

Also, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.), who was critical of proposed changes in the Senate chamber, has become convinced everything will be all right. Capitol architects explained the chamber has been remodeled four times since it was completed in 1859, and each time there were far-reaching changes. Lodge visits the chamber frequently to check on the progress of the work.

Power Fight

There was some dizzy voting when the Senate restored the President's public power program that the Appropriations Committee ripped out of the Interior Department's budget bill.

One instance was Senator Harry Cain (R., Wash.), who went firmly down the line against the projects. He is the first Senator from his State in 21 years to oppose public power developments. The last was Senator Miles Poindexter, defeated in 1928.

Another instance was the dizzy votes of Senators Zales Ecton (R., Mont.), and Richard Russell (D., Ga.). Their balloting cleared up a long-standing mystery.

Last winter, during the civil rights fight, Ecton bolted his fellow Republicans and sided with the Dixiecrats. His action caused a lot of eyebrow-raising. Russell's vote against the Hungry Horse power project in Montana revealed it was in payment for Ecton's earlier support.

A strong private utility adherent, Ecton opposed the Hungry Horse public power program. Russell voted for all the other disputed projects. But on Hungry Horse he lined up with the Montana Power & Light Co. as his part of the deal with Ecton.

Note—Chief credit for the Administration's smashing victory on the power issue belongs to Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.), who masterminded the smart parliamentary strategy, and Senators Robert Kerr (D., Okla.), and Lyndon Johnson (D., Tex.), who led the floor battle.
